JRI-Poland.org is proud to announce the “Next Generation Project” - the most significant advancement in our history, aimed at efficiently managing our burgeoning database, and provide researchers with a more seamless and satisfying user experience.

“We will create and upgrade JRI-Poland systems through a new website and a new data management system. We are reinvesting in our future to establish dramatic new inter-connectivity between our researchers and records.”

New Website
A ground-up rebuild designed specifically to address the growing needs of our researchers
- Timely updates on record acquisitions and availability via the website and email announcements
- New search interface designed with filters and mapping of results to maximize productivity
- Personal researcher work space tracking favorite and recent searches and towns of interest
- Consolidated “Knowledge Base” as a invaluable reference of articles to aid in all areas of research

New Data Management System
A shared master control system to manage data, organize extraction efforts, sources and projects
- Increased efficiency for volunteers in uploading and improving data
- Advanced tracking of all record sources, extractions, projects and town fundraising goals
- Quickly determine if we have records and sources of interest pertaining to researcher inquiries
- Time saving tools for data managers, area coordinators, town leaders and extractors

We have raised sufficient funds to satisfy round 1 of development from the professionals with whom we have contracted. The “Next Generation Project” is a continuing commitment to our future as new technologies emerge and researchers needs evolve. Round 2 of fundraising will ensure we meet our goals to complete the launch of our system for December 2020.

No words can adequately convey the impact of this investment on the research of Jewish records of Poland. With your generous support we will catapult JRI-Poland light years ahead within a relatively short time. Donate at JRI-Poland.org: Select “Next Generation Project” as Allocation.
