... but first a word from our coordinator

Let me introduce you to Mark Froimowitz. Not only is he a new member of our SIG, he is about to become its new Coordinator. The time has come for me to step down, and Mark is taking over. He's a Ph.D research chemist designing drugs mostly for psychiatric diseases. He lives in Newton, Mass., with his wife Marilyn. A son goes to UMass/Amherst and a daughter is a senior in high school. Mark's interest in Kielce-Radom comes from his mother (maiden name Zucker), who was born in Stopnica. His father was also born in southern Poland. But, as he says, "My main qualification for being the coordinator seems to be that I am willing to do it!"

In the summer of '96 at the Boston seminar, when Warren Blatt and Lauren Davis brought together a few Kieitzers and Radomers to measure the interest in forming a SIG, I volunteered to coordinate the effort "for a short time to get things started." Now, 708 pages later, including 337 pages of extracts representing approximately 20,000 events with the names of 100,000 persons, and with membership now exceeding 300, that "short time" has ended.

I have thoroughly enjoyed serving the SIG. I've met some very interesting people from all corners of the globe and have had the satisfaction of knowing that I've helped others get a better insight into their past. The friendships I've made I hope will continue.

The SIG has met with outstanding academic success. It has been acclaimed for its contributions to Jewish genealogy. But it still needs your help. First, it's time to renew your subscription as we enter the year 2000. You'll find a convenient renewal blank enclosed.

But it also needs more editorial contributions. If you have some information that can be helpful to others, please come forward. Notify Warren Blatt of what you have available for future issues. I've located an English translation of a Yizkor book about Zwolen, for example. And I am hoping to obtain a first person accounting of life in Radom shtetls before the 1939 Nazi invasion.

But for now, go through this issue to find more fascinating information about Szydłowiec, Chmielnik, Sandomierz province, and Staszów, together with extract data from Radoszyce, Sobków and Wolbrom..

Although I'll be turning over the records to Mark during the next few months, I'll be available to tie up any loose ends. And I'll always be available to comment on your queries. Any of the back issues will have my address, and you can always reach me through my e-mail address <genes17@earthlink.net>. And finally, my thanks to you for having allowed me to serve you these past years.

Russian-Japanese War of 1904-1905

Jewish soldiers injured, killed, or missing in action

The Russo-Japanese War, which took place almost a century ago, had profound consequences on the conditions of the Jews in Russia and on their ever-increasing pace of emigration.

The war grew out of the misguided Russian foreign policy, and out of what was seen as a necessity to boost Tsar Nicholas II's regime internally by a "short, victorious war", in words of Russia's Interior Minister, V. Plehve. First, Russia broke the terms of its treaty with China by introducing military into Manchuria. Then, instead of negotiating with Japan over spheres of influence in the Far East, it annexed Manchuria. On February 8, 1904, the Japanese attacked Russian fleet in Port Arthur (now Lushun, in North-East China). The attack was successful and made headlines around the world. For the next year, Port Arthur became a battleground, which cost great many lives to both sides. The city surrendered to the Japanese in the end of December. 25,000 Russian troops were taken prisoners by the Japanese. Russia's Pacific fleet, and the Baltic fleet that came to its rescue, were decimated by the Japanese as well. The result of the war was emergence of Japan as world power. For Russia, it was a major disaster, one which directly contributed to the civil unrest, the Revolution of 1905, the rise of nationalism and, of course, sharp increase in anti-Semitism and a wave of bloody pogroms that lasted for over two years.

As it happened too many times in history, Russian Jews fought in a war that was not theirs, for the country that treated them as sub-humans, against the backdrop of official persecutions, mob attacks, and a deep sense of despair. And yet, as it happened too many times in other wars, the history of the Russo-Japanese war is filled with stories of Jewish bravery and patriotism. The most notable and well known example is the heroic conduct of Yosef Trumpeldor, a 24 year old dentist. He lost one arm during a battle at Port Arthur, but refused to leave the front, asking for a sword and a gun. He continued fighting, was taken prisoner when Port Arthur fell, was awarded four times with the St. George Order, the highest Russian military award.

Later he emigrated to Palestine and was killed in 1920 in a battle with Arabs.

Medical student Henryk Goldszmit, one of the first Jews accepted to the Warsaw University to study medicine, served in field hospitals in Manchuria. He wanted to be a writer, while his family wanted him to become a doctor. He became both and was known to the world as Janusz Korczak. He ended his life in Treblinka gas chambers, comforting the children of the orphanage which he directed in the Warsaw Ghetto.

Many thousands of Jews, less known or totally unknown in the big world, fought, were injured, killed, or missing in the Russo-Japanese war. In the tradition of the times, many Russian papers printed the names of the soldiers killed or missing in action. A compilation of nearly three thousand Jewish names was prepared and transliterated into English from notices that first appeared in the Russkij Invalid newspaper in 1904-1905. The records provide information of considerable genealogical value to those with roots in the Russian Empire, including the Kingdom of Poland.

Presented here are those names from Kielce and Radom gubernias, transliterated from the Russian. This computerization of this database was done by Josh Feldblyum for the FAST Genealogy Service. The complete information about each person will be translated on an as-needed basis, at a charge of $18.00 per record. The records can be ordered from FAST Genealogy Service, 8510 Wild Olive Drive, Potomac, MD 20854, USA. Original records are not available, only their exact translations.

The complete list of 3,000 names for all gubernias is available at the FAST web site: <http://www.avotaynu.com/fast/rjmain.htm>.

The Szydłowiec Memorial Book: An Excerpt

An Outline of the History of the Jews of Szydłowiec

by E. Lifshutz, translated from the Yiddish by Max Rosenfeld

Jews probably settled in Szydłowiec in the middle of the 16th century. Although we have no precise information about this, the increased number of fairs and also the fact that a Radziwil was landholder are strong indications of the presence of Jews. The Radziwils were traditionally strong supporters of the development of commerce, and were inclined to allow Jews to settle on their lands and in towns because they believed that Jews brought great benefits wherever they settled and helped economically strengthen the towns where they were permitted to live. It is very likely that Jews had already begun to settle in Szydłowiec even before the time of the Radziwils, perhaps after the town acquired the right to conduct fairs. However, we have no proof of this.

The earliest information that we have about Szydłowiec as an organized community dated from much later – from the last decade of the 17th century. This information concerns a rabbi of a great renown in the Jewish world – Rabbi MaHaRam Ash. (Ash is the abbreviation of Eisenstadt, the town where Rabbi Meir served as rabbi for 27 years, from 1717 until his death in 1744.) He is the author of several works, the most famous of which is the two volume Ponim Me'iros.

The young genius became Rabbi of Szydłowiec, probably in 1693-1700. Later, the MaHaRam Ash was rabbi in Prosnitz, Moravia, and in Eisenstadt, Hungary, where he died in his early seventies.

Rabbi Meir left Szydłowiec not because he was looking for a larger community, but because the small Jewish community of Szydłowiec could not yet afford to maintain a Yeshiva. It is evident that the young rabbi's association with the community was a close and a warm one, because about a quarter of a century later, after he had already served as rabbi in important communities and his fame had grown in the rabbinical world, he returned to Poland to become rabbi of Szydłowiec for the second time. This time the Jewish community of Szydłowiec could afford to comply with its rabbi's request and opened a yeshiva under his supervision.

There are indications that at approximately this time, Szydłowiec was already a community which the Council of Four Lands could find worthy of consideration. It is stated in a 1719 statute of the Council of the Four Lands that the village of Przysucha is part of the environs of Szydłowiec. This indicates that Szydłowiec was even then a kind of center of the surrounding smaller villages.

A non-Jewish source dating from the end of the third quarter of the 18th century provides some information about the general situation of the Jews of Szydłowiec. Johann Philip DeCarosi, a natural scientist, geologist and mineralogist, came to Poland at the invitation of King Stanislaw August Poniatowski, to study salt mining and mining in general. In the years 1778-1780, DeCarosi travelled throughout Poland in the course of his researches. During that time, he wrote lengthy letters to his friend, the famous Polish statesman and economist, Count August Masinski, and in these letters he wrote the following about Szydłowiec:

"The Jewish quarter is entirely built of wood; however, it takes up a great deal more space than does the Christian section. The houses, which are more crowded together here, are mostly in good condition. However, the streets are without organization, and, aside from the sturdy stone bathhouse, they are dirty and foul-smelling.

"At the same time, we can see here how right Moses was when he gave his brethren the Commandment of cleanliness, and how little the advice availed. Judging by the area which the Jewish section occupies, and by the Jewish habit of living crowded together, the number of Jews here must be ten times the number of Christians. In compliance with their principles, they are not engaged in noble and clean occupations, and the commerce of the area lies entirely in their hands. They deal not only in commodities that come to us from abroad, but also in items that are produced in our area, such as pig iron, cast iron, wood for furniture and construction, and millstones and whetstones that are produced in the village of Pogorzaly, which belongs to the local nobleman. In addition to this, they deal in mortar, grain, liquor, hides and so forth.”

Why DeCarosi felt that dealing in millstones, whetstones, iron, furniture, grain, mortar, hides and even liquor was not “noble and clean,” remains his secret.

In 1765 – about the time that DeCarosi visited Szydłowiec – there were, according to a Polish census, 902 Jews in the shtetl and the surrounding area. We know that the Polish censuses were inaccurate. They were usually taken for fiscal purposes, such as head taxes, and so forth. Jews would find out beforehand when a government agent was supposed to visit, and many people, especially poor people who could not pay the taxes, would hide when the agent came. This meant that the number stated in the census of the year 1765 was much smaller than the actual number of Jews in Szydłowiec at that time.

The town suffered badly during the Swedish invasion. In 1666 there was a total of 478 inhabitants in Szydłowiec. In the 18th century, Szydłowiec began to recuperate. By the time DeCarosi visited the town – about 1765 – there were already 203 houses in Szydłowiec. We know that in 1828 there were 3150 residents living in 263 houses, which means that there were 12 residents to a house. Therefore in DeCarosi’s time, the general number of inhabitants was 2400 in 203 houses. Since in 1828 the number of Jews was already 2049 out of a general total of 3160, we can also assume that the proportion some 60 years earlier was not very different and that in 1765 the number of Jews was at least 50 percent higher than the Polish census indicated.

In the 19th century, the Jewish population of Poland increased greatly. In 1816 there were 212,944 Jews in Poland, out of a general population of 2,732,234. At that time Jews comprise 7.8

percent of the population. In 1909 there were already 1,747,655 Jews in Poland, out of a general population of 11,935,318, with Jews comprising 14.6 percent of the population. In the years 1831-1855, the Jewish natural increase was proportionately higher than among non-Jewish.

In Szydłowiec, this rapid growth was evident. This can be seen in the following figures:

Year	General Population of Szydłowiec	Jews	Percent of Jews in Population
1827	3,160	2,049	64.8%
1840	3,602	2,321	64.4%
1865	3,798	2,780	73.2%
1893	6,423	4,599	71.6%
1909	7,958	5,971	75.0%
1910	8,597	6,433	74.8%

In 1909 there were only ten towns in all of Poland whose populations were three-quarters Jewish, and one of these was Szydłowiec.

In 1788, Duke Radziwil, the landholder of Szydłowiec, granted Jews an area of land so that they could build a synagogue, fence off a cemetery, build homes, and so expand the Jewish quarter. At the beginning of the 19th century, Szydłowiec passed from the hands of the Radziwils to the Sapiehas. The Sapiehas, however, did not hold title to the town for long; the town was freed from the rule of the nobles, and fell under direct Czarist power. In the years 1825-1862, Jews were not permitted to live outside the limits of the Jewish quarter. In 1862 the Polish administrator of the land, Count Alexander Wielopolski, abolished all legal restrictions for the Jews of Poland and, consequently, for the Jews of Szydłowiec as well.

In 1828, of the 263 houses in Szydłowiec, 45 were already of brick. Weekly market days were conducted, and twelve fairs were held each year, strengthening commerce in the town. Even 50 years later, the brick houses belonged to wealthy non-Jewish townsmen and to a few wealthy Jews. In July 1876 a fire broke out in the town, and as the Radom correspondent Israel Frankel writes in HaZefira, the blaze consumed all Jewish homes, "and only the synagogue and the Beis Midrosh (prayer and study house) were left standing as if by a miracle." The "miracle" was due to the fact that both the synagogue and the Beis Midrosh were brick buildings.

At the end of the 1880s, some ten years after the blaze, there were 330 houses in Szydłowiec, and 171 of these were already of brick.

In the revolution of 1905, Jews took part in the underground activities. Every older resident of Szydłowiec knew someone who in those stormy days was a member of the Jewish revolutionary parties.

The recently opened Okrana (Russian Secret Police) Archive in Poland informs us that "in Szydłowiec, Konsk District, the Post Office and City Council were invaded and the building superintendents were disarmed" by revolutionaries. This was such a daring act that the Radom governor, E.P. Shtshirovski, informed the Warsaw Governor General, G.A. Skalon, of it on January 3, 1905.

On the night of December 15, 1905, a group of revolutionaries invaded the office of the manager of the forest near Szydłowiec, tore up the portraits of the Emperor and took away the weapons they found here. "The following day," the report states, "probably the same group attacked the forest guards and took their weapons, insignia and all official documents." The attacks on Czarist officials and Czarist offices in and around a town whose population was three-quarters Jewish could not have been carried out without Jews.

In a work about Polish towns which was published several years ago, it is clearly stated that in the years 1905-1906 in Szydłowiec, "the revolutionary movement was especially strongly developed among the Jewish poor."

The first World War freed Szydłowiec from Czarist control. The mild Austrian military regime hardly made itself noticeable. The town, like all of Poland, suffered from hunger, but spiritually Szydłowiec was liberated. Various political and professional associations were established, and young people were caught up in national and social currents.

In the Minorities Treaty of 1919 Poland "undertakes to assure full and complete protection of life and liberty to all inhabitants without distinction of birth, nationality, race or religion." In almost the same words, this promise was repeated in the Constitution of 1921. However, Jews soon realized that the promise had absolutely no substance. Not only were they not considered equal citizens and not permitted to hold government positions, but the government often supported those who waged an economic battle against Jewish businessmen and workers. The harassment and the constant excess constituted an open war to drive Jews from the land where they had lived for nearly a thousand years.

Poland was a state composed of various nationalities. The minorities – Ukrainians, Jews, Germans, Belorussians and Russians – amounted to over 30 percent of the population. The Polish government was conducted by its leaders as if it were a homogeneous country of Poles only. All minorities were oppressed and persecuted; against Jews, who comprised over ten percent of the population, there was exerted a policy of economic extermination.

This policy, of course, also affected the Jews of Szydłowiec, but not with the force that it affected Jews in the larger cities. In Szydłowiec, over three-quarter of the population was Jewish. Here there could be no talk of boycotts, with rowdy pickets and constant fights. The non-Jewish element was too small here for such large-scale anti-Semitic activities. However, the Jewish industrialist in Szydłowiec had to sell his goods on the general market, and there he met with strong opposition that Poland brought to bear against everything that had to do with Jews.

The first census in the new Poland of 1921 showed that Szydłowiec had a general population of 7,200 and a Jewish population of 5,501 (77.1 percent). In the 1920s and 1930s the town was "proletarianized." A new industry was added, which lay entirely in Jewish hands. This was the mechanized shoe industry which employed hundreds of Szydłowiec Jews. The stitchers, the cobblers and the master craftsmen were all Jews. The shoes manufactured in Szydłowiec were sold in the farthest reaches of Poland. In addition to this, Szydłowiec possessed older industries, such as its 14 tanneries, some of which were so well equipped and so highly mechanized that they were comparable to the most modern tanneries in Poland. Some tanneries imported not only the newest machines from Germany, but even German master craftsmen and specialists. The owners of all the tanneries were Jewish.

The quarries, all ten, also belonged to Jews. The stone industry was not new to Szydłowiec. As can be seen in DeCarosi's description, in the 18th century Szydłowiec Jews had already dealt in millstones and whetstones which came from the town's cliffs. The cliffs in Szydłowiec also caused the development of a local industry – tombstone carving. However, the Szydłowiec tombstones were of a distinctive nature.

In 1958 the two Christian art historians, Jacek Antoni Zelinski and Lucina Krakowska, discovered in the Szydłowiec cemetery a large number of tombstones which had survived the Nazi ravages. They were astounded to find that beside the traditional motifs, some of the tombstones contained exceptional idyllic scenes.

Before the Holocaust, Szydłowiec also had metal workshops and a factory of agricultural tools, which belonged to Jews. In addition it should be noted that there were a larger number of home industries: tailors, dressmakers and seamstresses.

The active economy of Jewish Szydłowiec would have been impossible without the fraternal help which this shtetl, like almost all Polish-Jewish shtetlekh and large communities, received from the American "Joint". [The "Joint" is the Joint Distribution Committee, Ed.] The "Joint" established funds for free-loan societies, supported Jewish institutions and helped support poor Jews, who often constituted a large portion of the Jewish community. The support provided by children and relatives in America was also of great help.

How large was the population of Szydłowiec before the Nazi invasion? A. Rutkowski, who researched the destruction of the Jews of Szydłowiec, states that "in 1939 there were 7,200 Jews living in Szydłowiec – nearly 90 percent of all the inhabitants," and the anonymous author of the introduction to the exhibit, Matsevoit Beyt ha-Kevurot HaYehudi BeShidlovtse, believes that in 1938, Szydłowiec already had a population of 10,300, 78 percent of whom were Jews.

In the years 1940-1941, Jews from nearby as well as from more remote localities, poured into Szydłowiec, until the number reached approximately 12,000. This occurred because at that time the Szydłowiec ghetto was somewhat more peaceful than other ghettos in the area. In the first two years, the Nazi butchers in Szydłowiec accepted bribes while creating an illusion of security. In this way they caused more Jews to fall into their snares.

In mid-1942 – before the September 1942 deportation to Treblinka and before the great slaughter – over 15,000 Jews were herded together and driven into Szydłowiec. Szydłowiec was the last stage before their annihilation. Their deaths marked the extinction of a venerable Jewish community which had been in existence for no less than 400 years.

This excerpt from the Szydłowiec Memorial Book (1989) has been made available to the Kielce-Radom SIG by Sid Davis, former program director of the Voice of America, and NBC News vice president, whose mother's family emigrated from Szydłowiec.

A few copies of the English translation of the yizkor book are still available at reasonable prices by writing to The Shidlovtzer Benevolent Society, 2949 137th St., Flushing, NY 11354.

The Lagover Mutual Benefit Society Cemetery

By Sid Orfus and Max Katchky

The 1938 Constitution of the Lagover Mutual Benefit Society states that "every Jewish man of good moral character who is not under eighteen or over forty-five years of age shall be eligible for membership. The annual dues for a member family of the Society is $17.80, paid in equal quarterly installments. Every member of the Society in good standing is entitled to the following benefits: (1) Examination by the Society Doctor, (2) Sick Benefit, (3) Funeral Benefit, (4) Funeral Expense, (5) Burial Ground, (6) Hospital." The Society, organized January 30, 1931, purchased for its members a section in the Lambton Mills Cemetery (established in 1924), located at 1293 Royal York Road, in the west end of Toronto. Sections in Lambton Mills Cemetery were also purchased by the Anshei Chmielnik, Beth Jacob V'Anshei Drildz, and Ostrovtsler Congregations.

The following Lagover Cemetery transcriptions were recorded directly from the tombstones by Sid Orfus and Max Katchky in May 1999.

Lagover Mutual Benefit Society Holocaust Memorial
Lagover Section — Lambton Mills Cemetery — Toronto, Canada

The Lagover Mutual Benefit Society Holocaust Memorial

Lagów was pillaged on October 7, 1942 when 2000 citizens were deported to Treblinka. To remember some of those that were murdered during WWII, a Holocaust Memorial tablet, donated by the late Isadore (Itshe) Freeman, was erected in front of the Lagover section of the Lambton Mills Cemetery in Toronto, Canada.

Dedicated in the early 1950s, the inscription in Yiddish reads,
“in remembrance of the souls of Lagow and vicinity and from all Poland who perished by Hitlers’ murderers. Forever we will remember you”.

Surnames are inscribed in English, with the given names in Yiddish.

Chmielnik Research

by Irwin Gordon (YaShad), M.L.S.

Several issues of the Kielce-Radom SIG Journal have devoted several articles regarding Chmielnik research sources. Among them are landsmanschaft records such as the Chmielnik Society Meeting Minutes (1935-78), extant at the YIVO Institute for Jewish Research in New York (see "Kielce-Radom Landsmanschaftn" in Vol. 1, No. 3 - Summer 1997, p. 10). I wish to expand further upon the myriad of material still available and accessible for this shtetl.

In January 1988, I began intensive research on the ZALTZMAN, SZCZERBA (SCHERBA) and GUTMAN families of Chmielnik, Kielce Guberniya. My maternal grandmother, Hilda (Minke Hudes bas-Shmuel Herzl) CUTLER (1908-1995), z"l, was born Zaltzman in Chmielnik. There are entries and references to my family members in several standard reference sources, such as the Yizkor Book Pinkas Chmielnik (pp. 457, 485-88, 574, 607-08, 639-40, 1135-36, 1268, 1287-88); Encyclopaedia Judaica (1971), 5:484-85; Isaiah Trunk's Judenrat (1996/72), pp. 467, 639 - note 46; and Martin Gilbert's The Holocaust - A History of the Jews of Europe during the Second World War (1986/85), pp. 547 - note 52, 873.

Beginning in October 1989, I have attended meetings of the Chmielniker Sick & Benevolent Society of New York. Founded on December 15, 1929, it remains an extremely vibrant and active organization. This May, almost ten years later, I was officially appointed as the Society's Recording Secretary simply due to dwindling numbers and the desire for older members to have younger people join and carry on their legacy. The Chmielniker Society held quarterly meetings every Purim, Yom HaAtzma'ut and Chanukah in Chanin Hall at the Workmen's Circle, 45 East 33rd St. (and Madison Ave., on Sholom Aleichem Place), New York, NY 10016.

Its Annual Yohrzeit Service has been held fastidiously every Hoshana Rabbo since 1942 solely to honor the k'doshim that perished in the Shoah. Since last year, the Society holds only two meetings per year. Currently, its annual journal, Hed Halrgun, is consistently published every Erev Rosh HaShanah out of its Tel-Aviv headquarters.

Joining the Society proved quite fruitful for my research. During every meeting, I would show landsleit (often past the point of annoyance!) the shtetl's detailed street map photocopied from Pinkas Chmielnik (pp. 55-56) and would ask them precisely where my family lived. I exhaustively interviewed numerous members who intently and fondly remembered them, including exact streets and house numbers. This resulted in my submitting several articles over the years to Hed Halrgun.

Additionally, I was able to contact landsleit all over the world that knew my family, including long-lost cousins in São Paulo, Brazil and Tel-Aviv.

My illustrious, much adored and admired great-great-grandfather, Rebbe Yitzchok-Y'shayah ben-Aryeh Zaltzman (1863-1942), zt"l, a Kotsker Chossidic Rebbe, lomdon and admor, was the Rosh-Yeshivah in Chmielnik. In 1936, Rebbe Zaltzman attempted to make Aliyah with his wife, Breindel and their youngest son, Duvid, to Jerusalem, but were unable to do so because of the Hebron riots. Reb Zaltzman, Breindel and Duvid both perished Al Kiddush HaShem during the Shoah. Rebbe Zaltzman's nephew, Shmuel ben-Moishe Aharon Zalzman (1890-1943), was the Second Chairman of the Chmielnik Judenrat (Jewish Council).

Fortunately, two students of my great-great-grandfather, both of whom reside nearby me in Sheepshead Bay and Kings Highway in Brooklyn, NY, still faithfully attend the annual meetings. As a result of my many successful connections, I eventually visited Israel during the High Holy Days in 1993 and met yet another student of my ancestor who lives in B'nai-B'rak. He is the last one alive left in Israel.

Interestingly, the translated and redrawn Chmielnik Map (Vol. 2, No. 4 - Autumn 1998, p. 15) lists "Mendel Meir Gutman's Field," only yards from the eastern bank of Chmielnik's river (actually, it was merely a small stream). Both my g-g-grandmother Breindel's younger brother, Mendel-Meir (1880-1912) and their father (my g-g-g-grandfather), Leibish Gutman (1828-1916), owned these shtetl-renowned garbereiyen (leather tanneries) along Busker Veg ("Busker Way") and a large farm, located just on the edge and outskirts ("suburbia") of town.

Incidentally, Mendel-Meir had an older brother named Itsche-Meyer. However, this Itsche-Meyer is not the same person (surnamed DOMB), who owned the nearby brewery. Indeed, chmiel means "hops" in Polish, clearly indicative of this shtetl's founding and original main industry.

Isidore/Yitzchok ben Kalman Goodman (1889-1949) and his son Meyer (1908-1986), distant cousins to my Gutman family branch, were both founding and charter members of the New York Chmielniker Society in 1929. Still going strong, the Society tenaciously and stubbornly maintains its own cemetery burial plot in Beth-Israel Memorial Park in Woodbridge, New Jersey [Block #2, Section B].

The last issue of the K-R SIG Journal also listed Chmielnik Marriage Record extracts from 1876-1884 (Vol. 3, No. 3 - Summer 1999). Numerous relatives of mine are listed, notably four of my g-g-grandparents: Yitzchok-Y'shayah Zaltzman, Breindel Gutman (p. 66 - 1882, akta #4), Moishe-Shia Szczerba and Alte-Sora BERGER (p. 71 - 1884, akta #40). My mother, Roslyn "Lynn" Muriel (Roize "Reizel" Matil bas-Yehudah Yidel), z"l (1928-84), was named after both her maternal grandmother, Rose Szczerba (1889-1918), who in turn was named after her paternal grandmother (Moishe-Shia's mother), Roize-Matil LERNER or, more probably, ZAKONIWICZ (cf. p. 59 - 1877, akta #26).

Moreover, Yitzchok-Y'shayah's first name and surname are also erroneously transposed and misspelled in his June 1863 Vaisletz/Wislica birth record as well. Furthermore, Yitzchok-Y'shayah's father's name was actually Aryeh, not Aron, because he already had a living brother named Moishe-Aharon. This is further imparted and confirmed by several supporting facts: his May 1954 Yad Vashem Daf-Ed (Page of Testimony) filed by his youngest son Michl and repeated oral recollections from Chmielniker landsleit.

Remarkably, the obvious answer (or so it is to me now) came from a long-forgotten and camouflaged family "mystery" tidbit which I was finally able to decipher and uncover: the Hebrew/Yiddish name of my uncle, Arthur Leonard (born in August 1925), is Leibish-Aryeh. On the surface of course, the ikkar (Hebrew root/original) and its companion kinnui (Yiddish/secular equivalent) made this commonplace double-name component deceptively seem henceforth like a typically ordinary repetition and redundancy. In truth, my uncle was named after not only one, but two of my grandmother's great-grandparents, namely Leibish Gutman and Aryeh Zaltzman!

All issues of Hed HaIrgun (1962+), serve as a naturally necessary, continual updated supplement to Pinkas Chmielnik, published in 1960. Like the Pinkas, Hed HaIrgun is also written primarily in Yiddish and Hebrew, with some scant articles in English. Although most issues are available at YIVO, several volume sets are missing. Luckily, the Jewish National & University Library (JNUL) in Jerusalem carries those missing issues.

It must be emphasized that Hed HaIrgun remains an excellent genealogical source, notably for efficiently locating and contacting Chmielniker landsleit worldwide. If you wish to write letters or articles regarding any genealogical inquiries, their address remains:

The Jewish Population in the Towns in Sandomierz Province* in the Second Half of the Seventeenth Century

by Zenon Guldon

"Ludność Żydowska w Miastach Województwa Sandomierskiego w II połowie XVII w."

An article from Biuletyn Żydowskiego Instytutu Historycznego w Polsce

BŻIH, #3-4/123-124 (1982), pages 17-29

Translated from the Polish by Gwido Zlatkes

Edited by Warren Blatt

THE STATE OF RESEARCH ON THE SIZE OF THE JEWISH POPULATION IN THE 16TH –18TH CENTURY

The previous population studies concerning Polish territories in the 16th-18th centuries generally focused on total numbers of population: in the second half of the 16th century, after the Swedish wars of the second half of the 17th century, and at the end of the 18th century¹. Their principal source basis were taxation registers (for the land tax [tanowe], the household tax [podymne], and the poll tax [pogłowne]) for the 16th-18th centuries, and the state and the church population surveys at the end of the 18th century. The uneven scholarly usefulness of the tax sources puts into question not only the absolute population numbers in the respective periods, but even the development trends over the whole epoch of the Polish Republic of the nobility².

The research of the immigration, and the ethnic, national and religious structures still remain underdeveloped³.

The Jewish population can be the easiest delineated by the criterion of faith. The principal basis for studying the number and distribution of the Jewish population in pre-partition Poland are the lists of taxpayers created as a result of the collection of the Jewish tax poll. This tax was first introduced by the Piotrków Sejm of 1583, in the amount of one floren *a singulo et uno quoque capite*⁴. In the second half of the 16th century, poor Jews were exempted from the poll tax, and Jewish servants (czeladź) paid lower rates⁵. Already by ca. 1580, the Jewish poll tax was fixed; thenceforth the total sum of the tax was assigned, and the Jewish autonomous authorities, namely the Council of Four Lands, provincial councils, and kahals were responsible for assigning specific levels of taxation⁶.

In 1569, the Jews in the Crown (without the Crown Prussia) paid only 6029 złoty of the poll tax (see table 1). This, if we treated this source literally, would yield an estimation of a little more than 6,000 Jews.

* Editor's Note: Sandomierz Województwa was the province of pre-partition Poland that corresponds to what later became Kielce and Radom gubernias. The seven districts of Sandomierz Województwa (pre-1795) covered all of future Kielce and Radom gubernias (1867-1917), with the exception of southwest Kielce gubernia (Miechów, Olkusz districts), and it also included some of Garwolin and Łuków districts of Siedlce gubernia, and some of western Galicia (Pilzno, Tarnów, Ropczyce districts).

Translator's Note: The term "province" is used here for Polish word województwo, and "district" is used for powiat.

I. Schiper based on the 1578 poll tax lists, however he interpreted them that in practice the poll tax was collected not from individuals, but only from the heads of families or households. Thus he assumed that 1 złoty of the poll tax covered 6 to 11 people, and estimated the number of Jews in the Republic at at least 100,000 people⁷. Also M. Horn stated on the basis of a comparison with other kinds of sources a limited usefulness of the poll tax as a demographic source. He resolved that for the towns of Red Ruthenia the multiplying factor of 3.3 persons per 1 złoty of the poll tax should be applied⁸. Recently also A. Leszczyński accepts that the poll tax burdened only families, therefore he counts 6 people per one złoty of the poll tax⁹. On the other hand, Z. Sułowski claims with no justification that Schiper's data should be increased based on the results of M. Horn's research quoted above, thus one złoty of the poll tax would refer to 3.3 persons. Z. Sułowski has eventually conceded that at the end of the 16th century the lands of the Polish Republic were inhabited by some 300,000 Jews¹⁰. As we noted above, Schiper applied the multiplying factor of 6 or 11 persons. Admitting Horn's data, we can lower Schiper's calculation but not invalidate it.

In the light of the tax circulars (uniwersały poborowe) there is no justification for the claim that the poll tax affected families or households rather than individuals. On the other hand, we must remember that according to S. Mirczyński, in 1598, practically every tenth Jew paid the poll tax¹¹. Thus the problem arises of evaluation whether the registers of the Jewish poll tax can be of any help in estimating the Jewish population. Without detailed analysis of these registers, all estimations must hang in the void not having a source basis. The data on the numbers of houses in each town are not the best material for comparison, because we do not know the inhabitation indicators for Jewish houses. We may recall here the controversy between I. Schiper and E. Feldman about the number of Jews in the 15th century. The former accepted 28 people per household, and calculated the total number of Jews in that period at 24,000, whereas the latter assumed 11-12 people per house arriving at the result of 10-11,000 Jews¹².

The estimations of the Jewish population in the first half of the 17th century have even less justification. I. Schiper, by extrapolating the 19th century birth rate, accepted in Jewish demography, concluded that the Jewish population doubled every 33 years: in 1578 it counted 100,000 people, in 1611 it reached 200,000, and in 1644, 400,000 people. Between 1648-1655, according to the Amsterdam activist Manasse, 180,000 Jews were killed or emigrated from the Polish Republic¹³.

The basis of the estimation for the second half of the 17th century are the records of the Jewish poll tax for 1662-1676. I. Schiper, using the data of the 1676 register, increased by 24%, i.e. the percentage of children under 12 years of age, concludes that in that period more than 182,000 Jews lived in the lands of Polish Republic¹⁴. This figure is significantly lower. Between the years 1662-1676 the revenue from the poll tax gradually decreased. If we count the total revenue from the 1662 poll tax as 100%, in 1673 it fell to 75%, in 1674, to 64%, and in 1675, to 49%¹⁵. For example, K. Dobrowolski claimed that the smaller head count in the records for 1662-1676 "was the result of a sham, and not the actual population decrease"¹⁶. Thus Schiper's acceptance of the 1676 record as the basis for calculation must have resulted in the underestimation of the Jewish population in the second half of the 17th century. Also, the multiplying factor used by Schiper is certainly too low. Already E. Vielrose used the factor of 1.66, and recently A. Gieysztorowa has suggested to increase it to 2¹⁷.

In 1764, 587,658 Jews in the whole Republic paid the poll tax. Raphael Mahler assumed that in order to get the total number of Jews, the poll number must be augmented by the number of newborn children which were exempted from taxation (6.35% of the total population), and those evading taxation which number was estimated at 20%. Eventually he calculated the total number of Jews in the Crown and the Lithuania at 749,968 people¹⁸. Already his contemporaries thought that the omissions were much higher. T. Czacki, who was linked to the Commission of the Treasury, wrote that the last inspection of the Jews in the years 1789-1791 resulted in 308,516 males in the whole Republic, "but I found after several audits that the number of males should be counted at at least 450,000". After adding the same number of females he establishes the number of Jews at 900,000 for the area of the Polish Republic, which was already significantly reduced in the first partition¹⁹. Thus Czacki increased by a half the data of the 1764 poll. This estimation has been accepted by T. Korzon²⁰.

The studies of Poland's population at the end of the 18th century generally agree that the population survey of 1789 contains the fullest population data. However, the research by N. G. Krykun showed that the count of the right-bank Ukraine population based on the 1789 survey of households (dymy) was by 31.6% larger than the population survey in the same year.²¹ According to I. Gieysztorowa, in some localities the latter did not include more than a half of the total number of inhabitants.²² We shall add that according to L. Truska and R. Jasas, the 1790 survey of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania omitted ca. 22% of its inhabitants.²³

It seems that the situation was no better with the comprehensiveness of the registration of the Jewish population. The Jews avoided polls not only because of financial, but also religious considerations. The 1789 inspection of the town of Łuck encountered serious problems in registering the Jews: "We should have explained them [the Jews] that the Republic, our common Mother who must be saved, had voted no tax on Jews as yet, and the registering of the population is absolutely necessary for the government's information. However, we the inspectors can not assure the Most Enlightened Commission in the truth of the conscription of the Jews. This is because the commission of the Łuck region has been informed by prominent citizens that the Jews in order to avoid true registration went from town to town, hid in the woods and villages, and in towns they concealed one another on roofs, in cellars and in the darkest corners. This can be solved by no one else but the Most Enlightened States by a decree".²⁴

Even more telling is the letter by the commissioner of the Krzemieniec district to the Commission of the Treasury written on June 21, 1790. This commissioner inspected the completeness of the sworn records of the Jewish population in each locality. He did not find unregistered Jews in the town of Hryców "however, up to 40 poor hid in the forest." After arriving in Łubuń it came out that "up to 300 heads ran into the fields and woods to avoid inspection." In Lubar, he managed to register 70 persons, "and it was hard to find more (even if this town may count more than 1,000 Jewish heads,) because they earlier escaped to the woods and across the Słucz river." In Nowe Połomne "all the poor hid in the forest." The same was in other towns. The Jews did not even have to commit perjury; in fact, the number of Jews present in a given place at the moment of registration was the same as in the register. The author of this very interesting letter suggested several means to help the situation, among them to conduct another inspection in the fall or winter "because the Jews during the summer season find it the easiest to hide either in woods or in fields in the wheat."²⁵ Also, the fact that in the towns of the Łuck district in 1790 there were only 2.87-6.63 Jews per household indicates that the poll registration was not complete²⁶. These data are the evidence that the past estimations of the size of the Jewish population in the second half of the 18th century were certainly too low, and the opinions of T. Czacki and R. Mahler in regard to the completeness of the registration of the Jewish population were too optimistic.

Z. Sułowski offered a hypothesis that in the period between the end of the 16th century and the end of the 18th century the Jewish population grew from ca. 300,000 to 1 million people, that is from 4% to 10% of the general population²⁷. The results of past studies presented above warrant a caution in accepting this estimation, and indicate the need of a very thorough source survey as well as more extensive use of the preserved sources.

THE JEWISH POPULATION IN THE TOWNS IN THE SANDOMIERZ PROVINCE IN THE SECOND HALF OF THE SEVENTEENTH CENTURY

Moving to our own attempt at estimating the number of the Jewish population in the towns of Sandomierz province in the second half of the 17th century, we should begin with the overview of the past research. Except for the Sandomierz district, no attempts were made at the presentation of the demographic situation in the towns of this region in the 17th century²⁸. Also, the scholarly value of the town monographs is uneven, as they are often written by non-professionals²⁹. The monographs of the rural deaneries by J. Wiśniewski³⁰ present the greatest value as sources. Detailed studies of the Jewish population have been conducted only in some of the towns³¹.

In this situation, the estimates for the Jewish population during the period concerning us must be based on the registers of the 1662 general poll tax, which exempted only children under 10 years of age, seniors, and beggars. These registers are preserved only for five [of the seven] districts in Sandomierz province: Chęciny, Opoczno, Radom, Sandomierz, and Ziemia Stężycka. Jews were recorded in separate tables (Judaeorum tabula), which have survived for the Chęciny and Sandomierz districts, or together with the Christian population in respective hamlets. The register for the Jews of the Radom district has not survived. For the Pilzno district we use the 1673 register. The register of the Wiślica district does not contain a record of the Jewish population. Thus the surviving registers for the years 1672-1673 omit the Jewish population in the Radom and Wiślica districts. Therefore we additionally use the 1676 register that contains the concerning us data for all towns in the province.

Deriving the estimation from several poll tax registers must negatively inform the results since in the Sandomierz province, the same as in the whole Polish Crown, the scholarly value of the poll tax lessens in the years 1662-1676. This is evidenced by the decrease in revenue from the poll tax in that period. If we count the level in 1662 as 100%, in 1673 it fell to 73.3%, in 1764, 60.2%, and in 1676, only 46.3%³². Thus in 1676 the poll tax was paid by less than a half of the population taxed in 1662.

Table 2 and the collective table 3 contain the data on the number of the taxed Jews against the general population in the towns of the Sandomierz province³³. We find Jews in 46 out of the total of 115 towns in the province. In 1676, in towns, the poll tax was paid only by 2262 Jewish taxpayers. This was only a small percentage of the province's population, since in 1662 the tax was paid by 255,018 people³⁴.

Taking into account the above decrease by almost 54% of the value of poll tax registers in the Sandomierz province for the years 1662-1676, we can assume that the number of Jews in 1662, totaling around 4500 people, was twice that of 1676. Perhaps the percentage in the actual decrease of the Jewish taxpayers in the years 1662-1676 was lower than the decrease in the general number of taxpayers. This assumption is warranted by the fact that the number of the Jews taxed in the towns of the Chęciny, Opoczno, Sandomierz, and Ziemia Sęczyńska districts decreased from 1337 to 921 people, i.e. only by about 21% (see table 3).

Finally, we need to add the estimated population exempted from the poll tax, and evading taxation. If we accept I. Gieysztorowa's claim that at least half of the general population did not pay taxes, we can estimate the number of the Jewish population in the towns of the Sandomierz province in the second half of the 17th century at about 9,000 people. The verification of this number, and the computing method employed here is a matter of future research.

An overview of the numbers of the Jewish population in the Sandomierz province in the 17th-18th centuries seems necessary. Past studies indicate that there was a substantial growth in the Jewish population over the 18th century. In Pińczów alone the number of Jews reached 5000 in 1748³⁵. The 1764 survey of Sandomierz province showed 42,972 Jews over one year of age; according to R. Mahler this allows the estimation of the total number of Jews at 54,840 people³⁶.

Therefore in the light of sources we can acknowledge a demographic expansion of the Jews in the Sandomierz province. In 1787, we encounter Jews in almost all towns in the province, and the Jewish population comprises more than 23% of the total number of town dwellers (Table 4). In the area of the Sandomierz province lived 25,758 Jews (including 19,937 in towns); that is more than 7% of the province's general population (341,317 people)³⁷.

An important fact for further research of the number and distribution of the Jewish population in the lands of the Republic in the 16th-18th centuries is the increasing frequency of Jews living in villages, beginning in the 17th century. From the mid-17th century, the immigration of the Jews to the Crown lands is practically insignificant. On the contrary, we can talk about the emigration of the Jews from Poland.

In this situation, we need to treat with some caution the claims of a significant progress of Judaization, or demographic expansion of the Jews in the 18th century. This may be connected with the unreliability of the estimations for the 16th-18th centuries, and the more comprehensive registration of the Jews in the second half of the 18th century.

As indicated above, the numbers of Jews in the sources from the second half of the 18th century arouses serious reservations. Still, the estimation of the size of the Jewish population in the Sandomierz province at the end of the 18th century remains an urgent scholarly task. Such an aim is possible because of the index of the sources for the dictionary of the Sandomierz province in the period of the Four-Year Sejm, that luckily survived in the Pracownia Słownika Historyczno-Geograficznego Ziem Polskich w Średniowieczu at the Institute of History of the Polish Academy of Sciences [PAN] in Kraków.

Only the retrogressive method can approximate the actual trends in the development of the Jewish population. At present, it is difficult to determine the period that can constitute the initial point for the retrogression. It cannot be the situation at the end of the 18th century, or the unreliable statistical data for the first half of the 19th century³⁸. Only a correction of the demographic statistics of the Polish lands in the 19th century would allow further discussion of this matter.

A "Memorial Day" In Staszów

by Jack Goldfarb

When Dr. Maciec Zarebski, chairman of the high school association, introduced me to the rural town of 20,000 in southern Poland, he described me as "a native American whose cantor father once sang in the synagogue here, and whose grandfather carved smoking pipes in a little shop in the Market Square."

I was at the high school to inaugurate my annual "memorial lecture" in my parents' ancestral shtetl, in memory of my thirty lost Staszów relatives consumed by the Nazi inferno in World War II.

These "memorial lectures" with open discussions afterwards, is my effort to get the young people of Staszów to share with me a remembrance of their town's 5000 vanished Jews who once made up half the population. The "memorial day" in the town's two high schools is scheduled on the anniversary of the day when the Nazis extinguished the life of the 400 year-old Staszów Jewish community. With the help of Dr. Zarebski, a civic-minded young physician, I invite a historian, eyewitness or ordinary citizen to speak.

In my recent address (with a Polish translator at my side) I told the youngsters about Staszów's righteous gentiles, 'true Christians' like Maria Szczecinska, a widowed railway clerk with five children, who risked her life and her family's lives to conceal fifteen Jews in the railroad station for two years. But I also pointed out that there were other townspeople who betrayed, robbed and even murdered their Jewish neighbors. The high schoolers listened with rapt attention. I wondered how often, if ever, this subject had been publicly discussed.

I expressed my painful sadness at the desecrated, abandoned Jewish cemetery where my four grandparents and other venerable forebears lie. Especially anguishing, I said, was the unmarked mass grave in a scrub-covered hollow holding over 500 victims of Nazi barbarism, massacred on the day of deportation. During the Occupation, the Nazis removed most of the tombstones for use as paving blocks in the muddy Market Square. When I appealed to the students as to what could be done to restore the derelict burial ground, I was deeply moved by their response.

"What would you like us to do?" one studious-looking youth asked.

"There ought to be a monument and a protecting fence," volunteered a dark-haired girl.

A husky, square-jawed youngster stood up. We will do something about it," he pledged firmly.

For years I had contemplated some practical way to memorialize Staszów's martyred Jews, including my uncles, aunts and cousins I had never known. I took on this self-assigned duty as a "descendent" of Staszów, born fortunately in America because my restless parents emigrated before the Nazi scourge.

As a child listening to the anecdotal shtetl yarns and nostalgic recollections of my parents and their reminiscing landsmen gathered in our house, I secretly longed to have been a part of their closely-knit little world. Tucked away in the parochial Polish countryside, the vibrant Staszów Jews supported a spectrum of credos from Chassidic orthodoxy to radical political movements; social activities from orchestral concerts to soccer leagues. With simchas communally shared, misfortunes mutually lamented, their society took pride in a caring intimacy, in the midst of poverty and recurring adversity.

Growing up in a more alienated, indifferent metropolitan America, I often wistfully imagined an idealized lifestyle in the little Polish shtetl. How I wished I could see it one day!

On the platform of the high school this past "memorial day" I felt a strange sense of belonging. It was as if the spirits of all those departed kin had returned to their beloved shtetl through my presence here.

Among the questions raised in the discussion period was one by a pretty 17 year-old girl. "What's your opinion of the accusation that Polish people 'have anti-Semitic in their blood?'"

I answered that Jews who had suffered from anti-Semitism in Poland were understandably bitter, and would probably always be so. But I believed it was just as wrong to condemn an entire nation as was anti-Semitism with its warped message of hate.

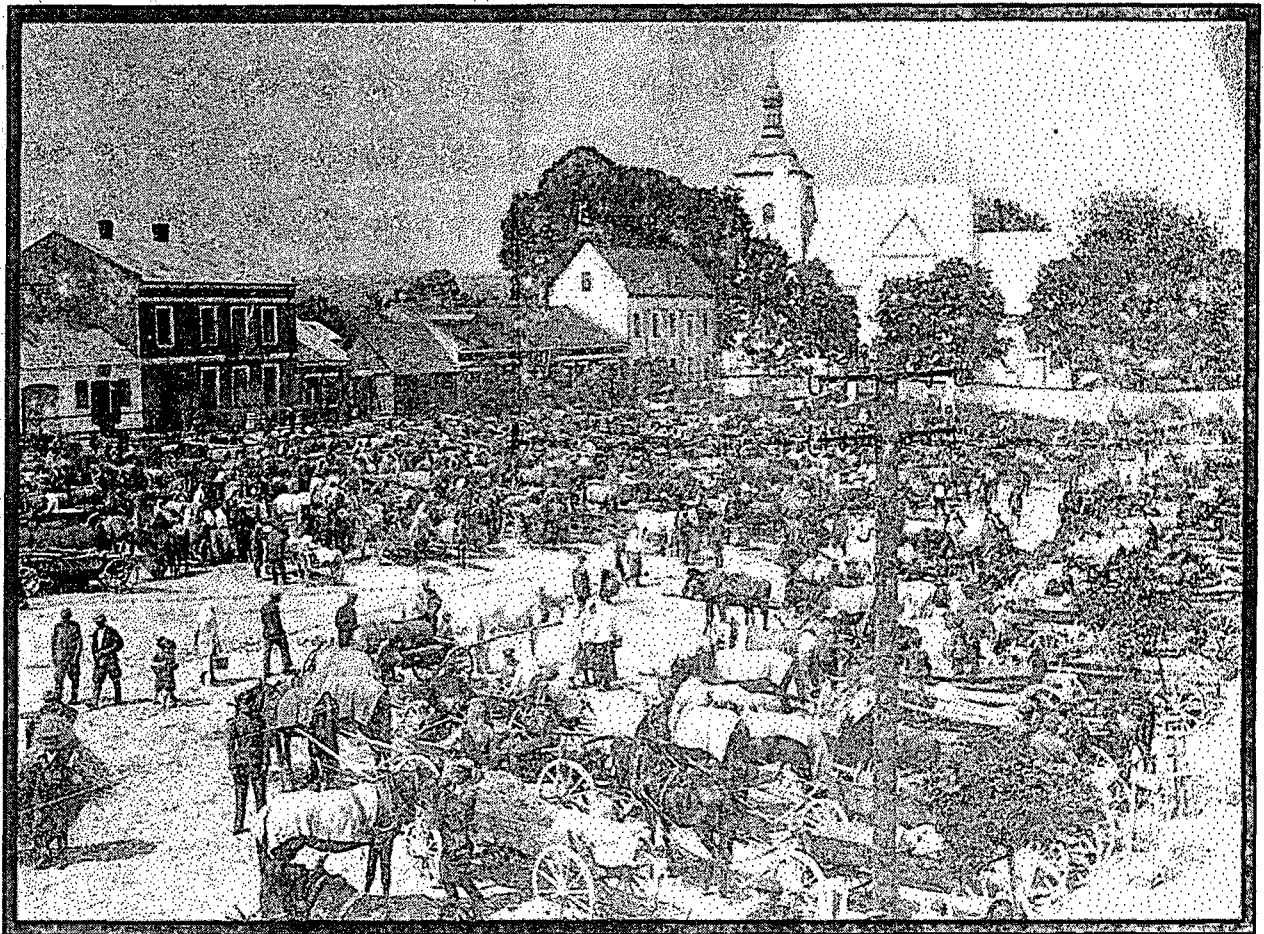

To another question, "was I visiting any Jewish families in town?" (There have been no known Jews here since the War). I was at first astonished, but then - wasn't it a good sign when people were not so conscious of who was or wasn't a Jew?

While making the critical point of my address, that racism, intolerance and ignorance led to the horrors of the Holocaust, I studied the faces of my young audience.

I wondered what meaningful effect, if any, my words might have on them.

The applause abated. The students rose to leave. The school principal assured me that many students would discuss the subject with their parents that night. A smiling boy and girl approached and presented me with bouquets of spring flowers. I carried the flowers to the devastated cemetery and placed these symbols of hope on the broken remnant of a tombstone, the only one I could find.

Radoszyce

This issue once again contains a very large and thorough set of marriage extracts, thanks to Dolores Ring. These extracts cover all the microfilmed Jewish marriages of Radoszyce, 1810-1884 — the Roman Catholic period (1810-1825), the Polish-language period (1826-1867) and the Russian-language period (1868+).

Radoszyce ("Radoshitz") is located 25 miles northwest of Kielce, and before WWI was in Końskie powiat (district) of Radom gubernia. In 1897, 1,728 Jews lived there, comprising 49% of the town's population.

Additional information on surnames and patronymics has been derived by the author from an analysis of data from Radoszyce, as well as records from surrounding towns, tracking families over an extended period of time. All conjectural information is noted in square brackets, to differentiate from the data that appears in the original records. The conjectures do not appear in the record itself.

Several abbreviations are used in the Radoszyce marriage extracts. A question mark denotes illegible information. (w) indicates a widow(er); (d) indicates that the parent was deceased at the time of the marriage.

Sobków

Sobków is a small town (646 Jews in 1897) which was in the Jędrzejów district of Kielce gubernia, located southwest of Kielce. This issue contains Sobków births from 1810 to 1838.

From 1810 through 1825, the Jewish vital statistic events were recorded in the Roman Catholic civil registry throughout the Duchy of Warsaw and then the Kingdom of Poland. Separate registers for each religion were used beginning in 1826. Marriages and Banns (wedding announcements) for Sobków for this period were printed in the first issue of the Kielce-Radom SIG Journal, I:1 (Winter 1997), pages 33-42.

Wolbrom

Also in this issue are extracts of Wolbrom marriages for 1810-1825. Wolbrom births from this period previously appeared in the K-R SIG Journal, II:1 (Winter 1998), pages 41-49.

The marriages are on two different set of microfilms. In the first set, over half the marriages are Jewish, and are for those living in the town of Wolbrom proper. The second set contains very few Jewish registrations. They are from the outlying villages of Nowey Lac, Kąpieli and Łobzów. In the post-1825 period, Jewish registrations for these villages were incorporated into the Wolbrom Jewish register.

The Wolbrom extracts contain no conjectures; they are a transcription of only that information which was written in the original records.

As always, without making a study of the rest of the records, it is sometimes difficult to tell the difference between a patronymic and a surname derived from a patronymic. Best guesses have been made here, but readers interested in Wolbrom should do their own research and draw their own conclusions

Caution

These extracts are intended to assist the researcher in selecting records that may be of use for further study. There may be errors in interpretation due to the uneven quality of legibility of the writing, the microfilming and the condition of the microfilm itself, in addition to errors and decay affecting the original record books. As always, it is prudent for the researcher, when using secondary source data such as this work, to examine the primary source data for final verification. It is always best for the genealogist to view the actual records pertaining to his/her family to verify the interpretation, and glean additional facts. — WB

AN OPEN LETTER TO OUR MEMBERS . . .

About the coming year ...

As you may have read, the Kielce-Radom SIG has been having a change of personnel in recent months. First, Lauren Davis, one of the initiators of the SIG, had to retire to pursue family matters. Following this issue, Gene Starn, our original coordinator, has taken a secondary position, giving up his duties to Sid Orfus and Mark Froimowitz. This leaves the burden of the SIG and this Journal in the hands of Warren Blatt, an overwhelming assignment. Warren, as you know, in addition to his many other duties and interests, has been a major contributor and editor to the Journal.

Now he seeks your help so that the Journal and the SIG may continue and grow.

How can you help? Each of us, from the novice to the professional, has had experiences in trying to discover information about their relatives from Kielce and Radom gubernias. Sharing those experiences with each other is one way you can help. Let us know what you have done and what you have accomplished. Tell us about your encounters in your search. Tell us about your family. Send examples of your findings – pictures, documents, etc. Our SIG is one of sharing so that we can all learn.

Another way you can help is to volunteer to take some of the load from Warren's shoulders – to help him organize and continue the job of overseeing the extracting of vital information found in the Mormon microfilms, to help him find Polish and Yiddish translators capable of turning important foreign publications into English at reasonable fees, submit transcripts like that done of the Lagover Cemetery on page 21 of this issue, and to uncover other material suitable for reprinting in the Journal. There are many ways to help.

It's time to renew your membership in the SIG ...

Although there was an increase in postal rates, the SIG saw fit to continue this coming year without raising annual dues and subscription rates. They remain the same, made possible only through more efficient and cost-saving features. But we urge you to send in your renewals as soon as possible. If you have misplaced the reorder form, here are the costs for Year 2000:

All U.S. and Canada:	US$26.00
All others	US$32.00 (plus another $6.00 for airmail delivery)

Send your check or money order, made out to "KR SIG" to our new coordinator:

Mark Froimowitz,
90 Eastbourne Rd.,
Newton, MA 02451

Tell your friends and colleagues about the Journal. Encourage them to join the SIG.
