... but first a word from our editor

In this issue, we have a focus on the town of Chmielnik – a translation of the article from Yad VaShem's Hebrew-language Pinkas HaKehillot; a transcript of the Chmielnik entries from the 1929 Polish Business Directory; the necrology of Holocaust martyrs from the 1960 Yizkor Book Pinkas Chmielnik; and a list of over 2,000 unique surnames appearing in the 1885-1900 vital records of Chmielnik, as indexed by JRI-Poland.

The vital records extracts in the issue are the 1866-1877 Ilza marriages; the 1872-1884 Końskie births; and births, marriages and deaths for 1846-1865 for Secemin (a "new" town for us).

This issue also contains an essay on the source material concerning Jews which can be found in the Polish State Archives branch in Radom, translated from Źródła Archiwalne do Dziejów Żydów w Polsce, recently published by the Polish State Archives. We previously published this book's essay on sources at the Kielce Archives branch (in VI:3, Summer 2002).

Rounding out this issue is Betty Starkman's account of a visit to the town of Ilza ("Dritsh"); and a call for information to create a ShtetLinks website for the town of Iwaniska ("Ivansk").

In news from the JRI-Poland project, the second batch of photocopies of index pages from the Radom Archives have just been received by the JRI team in Warsaw – over 1,500 pages. Much funding is required before these index pages can be transcribed and be made available. For more information on the towns included in these vital records, and how you can help, see the last issue (VII:1), pages 34-35.

I look forward to seeing many of you at the upcoming 23rd IAJGS International Conference on Jewish Genealogy, to be held in Washington, July 20-25. For more information about the conference, see < <http://www.jewishgen.org/dc2003> >.

As always, I am interested in your comments and feedback on the Kielce-Radom SIG Journal, and in what types of material you would like to see. Of course, we would welcome contributions of articles and other materials for the Journal. If you would like to assist, please contact me.

Published under the auspices of the Polish State Archives in Warsaw in 2001, Źródła Archiwalne do Dziejów Żydów w Polsce [“Archival Sources for the History of Jews in Poland”] is a 600-page volume containing over 50 essays, in Polish. Forty essays cover source material on Jewish history held at the various branches of the Polish State Archives, and ten essays cover archives in Israel. We published a translation of the chapter on the Polish State Archives branch in Kielce in Kielce-Radom SIG Journal VI:3 (Summer 2002), pages 41-49. Presented here is a translation of the chapter on the holdings of the Polish State Archives branch in Radom. – WB

The Radom Branch of the Polish State Archives (RBPSA) is the only archival center in Poland which has published a guide to Jewish materials in its possession.<sup>1</sup> This is in large part due to the richness of materials concerning history of Polish Jews as well as the unique value of many collections assembled. The guide, authored by Adam Penkalla, contains descriptions of several dozen of collections down to individual files (often with references to specific documents) and it should be a required introductory reading for anybody intending to utilize the Radom materials for the study of Jewish history. This article has a similar goal, although smaller in scope. It contains brief descriptions of the most valuable documents in their historical contexts. Described materials are grouped by subject with focus on those most interesting and unique. Footnotes point to specific studies, which focus on individual archival collections or discuss history of Jews in central Poland.

Old Poland (until 1795)

The RBPSA contains very little materials from the First Republic of Poland. Nearly all of them had been deposited in the Old Acts Archives [Archiwum Akt Dawnych] in Warsaw before WWII and they perished during the war. That does not mean, however, that we do not have any archival sources for Jewish history prior to 1795. Such materials – although few in number – have been dispersed through various collections of later date – particularly those from the 19th century – because they were used as attachments to current materials, mostly dealing with economic matters. For example, the oldest part in the collection of the Radom, Kielce, Lublin, and Siedlce Gubernia Agricultural and Government Property Administration [Zarząd Rolnictwa i Dóbr Państwowych Guberni Radomskiej, Kieleckiej, Lubelskiej i Siedleckiej], covering the years 1773-1918,<sup>2</sup> contains, among others, a small number of Jewish testimonies, written in classic German – a very rare occurrence. It also contains details of the credit contract (wyderkaf – from the German Wiederkauf) between the College of the Ordo Scholarum Piarum in Opole Lubelskie and the local kahal. There are also many copies of the modern era privileges given to cities and parishes containing references to Jews. Similar information can be found in the collection devoted to land property inspections. Many interesting facts are contained in the materials on the confiscation of the Church property in the 19th century which are deposited in the Radom Office of Fiscal Administration [Izba Skarbowa Radomska]. There is an attachment there containing a list of kahals in Janowiec and Zwolen made for the Benedict Order monasteries in Sieciechów of 1675 and a rare handwritten copy of records made for the parish church in Przytyk which contains a description of the local synagogue from the 18th century. Many attachments can be found also in archives of the Radom County Real Estate Administration [Hipoteka Powiatowa Radomska] (1606-1996), which undoubtedly contains materials relevant to the history of Jews. However, these records require diligent review.

From the Partitions to the January Uprising (1796-1863)

The archives of the Radom Gubernia Government [Rząd Gubernialny Radomski] (1815-1866) contain the richest sources for the history of Jews. The gubernia authorities were primarily interested in the activities and financial supervision of Jewish houses of worship, hence the greatest number of materials deals with these issues. Documents are kept in thick sewn books, which hold lists of people, who paid mandatory religious fees, as well as budgets and congregations' financial statements, property inventories, protocols of elections to supervisory boards, documents on construction and renovation of synagogues, ritual baths, kosher butcheries, and various property auctions. These documents are available for several dozen localities, including Ilża, Kazanów, Przysucha, Radom, Raków, and Sandomierz. Considerable number of documents concerns rabbis from the Jewish religious districts. Many materials document Jewish involvement in both government tax collections (kosher, consumption, trade, tobacco, liquor sale) and private ones (liquor sale, bridge and street fees). Most documents come from property auctions and contracts. Economic activities were on occasion directly linked with criminal activities and in the case of Jews these involved illegal production and sale of alcohol as well as practicing certain professions without a permit. There are quite a few documents describing such activities. Some individual documents in this collection refer to Jews converting to Catholicism and to their assimilation, demonstrated by the abandonment of their traditional garb. Excellent research material is contained also in other collections such as those dealing with financial and communal activities of the city governments where Jewish topics were frequently on the agenda. For example, materials on the accommodations for the Russian troops contain extensive lists of soldiers, assigned to specific domiciles and – in the case of larger cities – locations of individual houses; such information is an important source for studies of living conditions and of the structure of Jewish enclaves. Very valuable – and often utilized by historians – are historical and statistical descriptions of the cities in the Radom Gubernia of 1820 and 1860. They contain retrospective data on the size of the population in individual cities in various years and by showing ethnic and religious composition they make it possible to follow the demographic dynamics of Jews.<sup>3</sup>

The City of Radom collection [Akta miasta Radomia = AMR] for the years 1795-1950 contains many relevant materials. They deal with the functions of executive boards in the Jewish places of worship, construction and ownership of the mykva buildings, registration issues, participation of Jews in crafts and trade (including the local Merchants' Association [Zgromadzenie Kupieckie]), and in the emerging local industry. Preserved rich correspondence allows tracing the history of several Jewish leather tanneries, the textile factory of Selim Bloch, whose son, Bogumił Bloch, was the "railroad king," distinguished manufacturer, and a noted pacifist, nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize.<sup>4</sup> But these developments must be viewed in the context of the old Polish royal privilege, de nontolerandis Iudaeis, which even in the 19th century denied Jews the right to live within the Radom city limits and which Jews actively opposed. Such issues as the Jewish settlement in special jurisdictional territories in Staroścín and villages near Radom; illegal residences in the Radom downtown; assimilation; and many – unsuccessful – attempts to expel Jews from Radom are also very well reflected in this collection.<sup>5</sup> During this period the city started permanent resident books, which encompassed rich personal data. Complete sets of these books from the 19th century and later periods have survived to this day and they are outstanding sources for genealogical and demographic research.

In the first half of the 19th century, Radom was one of the very few cities in the Russian Poland which had a Jewish hospital. Its history is documented in the files of the Detail Council of the Jewish Hospital [Rada Szczegółowa Szpitala Starozakonnych] in Radom (1848-1870). These files contain documents on construction, financing sources (including lists of individual contributors from many localities in the Radom gubernia), medical and support personnel, food supplies, contributions for the purpose of providing treatment for the poor, and the hospital's involvement in fighting the cholera epidemic and other infectious diseases. There is also rich correspondence on hospital management and patient care with the state and local authorities as well as with various medical organizations around the country.<sup>6</sup> In a related collection – the Radom Gubernia Physicians Registry [Urząd Lekarski Guberni Radomskiej] (1839-1866) – there are materials about Jews admitted to feldscher certification exams and about their medical practices in some localities of the gubernia.

Many archival collections document participation of Jews in broadly understood economic life.<sup>7</sup> In the mentioned above Radom, Kielce, Lublin, and Siedlce Gubernia Agricultural and Government Property Administration there are separate files on Jewish settlements in Radom and Opoczno; financial settlements with local Jews by Anna Sapieżyna, the owner of Szydłowiec; and financial statements of Lewin Sunderland, the owner of a china factory, established in Ilża in 1823.<sup>8</sup> Jewish names can be found in hundreds of files on state, local, and private land properties. One such file contains a list of all homeowners in all urban centers of the Radom gubernia who paid real estate taxes on their houses in 1857. Even more information on economic activities is contained in the City of Radom Real Estate Office [Hipoteka Miejska Miasta Radomia] (1816-1978), Radom County Real Estate Office [Hipoteka Powiatowa Radomska] (1606-1996), and Ilża County Real Estate Office [Hipoteka Powiatowa Ilżecka] (1824-1946) collections. These collections are an indispensable for those researching property issues. Another excellent source, which is often neglected in historical research, is the notary documents. The RBPSA has more than a dozen of document collections from notaries public, who performed their duties in Ilża, Radom, and Kozienice. These materials enable us to follow in great detail increased involvement of Jews in business life as well as reconstruct its local dynamics, and learn about business activities of individual Jews. Notarial acts in the files deal with real estate purchases, sales, and ownership taxes as well as information on real estate, land ownership, associations, property division, apartment rentals, and many other issues. In the period discussed, these files also contain Jewish wills, which often donated substantial sums to various charities (including Christian ones). Also, business issues are indirectly reflected in the collection of the Radom County Supervisory Council for Charitable Institutions [Rada Opiekuńcza Zakładów Dobroczynnych Powiatu Radomskiego] (1833-1870), which contains materials on the establishment and operation of a credit institution for poor Jews of Radom the main purpose of which was to save the poorest Jews from creditors.

The beginning of the 19th century also marks the creation of a new category of documents: the vital statistics records. In 1810, registration of births, marriages, and deaths became official. For the next 15 years, Jewish data were recorded in the same books as the ones for Catholics; that is why their last names (or rather nicknames as they were usually derived from the first names) are often to be found in the records of the Catholic parishes. In 1826, special regulations required that Jewish data be recorded in separate books. The Radom archives have several dozen collections, containing documents of the Offices of the Vital Statistics of the Jewish Congregational Districts [USC Okręgi Bożnicze]; they were systematically updated [from the local USC offices] with the latest update in the year 2000. They were usually appended by attachments (“allegata”), which contained additional information, particularly about the persons getting married. Several collections (Białobrzegi, Gowarczów, Grójec, Kozienice, and others) also contain some of the series of books from the interwar period and the years of the Nazi occupation.

The Post-Uprising Period (1864-1914)

The second half of the 19th century witnessed a serious transformation of the Jewish community, with growing number of workers and the emergence and growth of socialist and Zionist organizations. The major source of information about Jews during this period is the archives of the Radom Gubernia Government [akta Rządu Gubernialnego Radomskiego] (1867-1917).<sup>9</sup> They contain predominantly documents related to broadly understood supervision of Jewish houses of worship. The largest group of materials concerns financial matters such as annual budgets, which include lists of people paying mandatory fees - divided into categories based on income - for membership in the congregation. These documents provide a great amount of information about incomes and expenditures of individual congregations as well as about the social stratification of Jews in various localities throughout the gubernia. They are also an excellent source for genealogical research. Another collection contains files of people employed by the congregations such as rabbis (fulltime and honorary) as well as cantors. Among them are CVs, certificates that the persons in question had never violated the law, certificates of skills, details of the selection processes, and descriptions of the installation ceremonies of rabbis in the synagogues.<sup>10</sup> Materials about applicants for the rabbi position contain less detailed material. But the files on selection of candidates for the leadership positions contain interesting information about the work of the most active and respected members of the local Jewish communities. Also, there are files available on the use of Jewish religious institutions such as synagogues, houses of worship, ritual baths, kosher slaughterhouses, cheders, and cemeteries. Materials on construction and repairs often contain itemized invoices and architectural drawings. They cover both, small localities such as Granica, Osiek, and Przytyk as well as cities, where thousands of Jews lived such as Końskie, Opatów, and Radom. The Radom Gubernia Government offer also many files containing information about various facets of Jewish civic activities. Also, large series of files deal with conversions - particularly interesting are the testimonies of the converts on the reasons for their conversions.<sup>11</sup> More materials deal with punishments for conducting religious instruction in private homes. Other issues are also reflected in this collection such as a rabbi's curse thrown on a Jewish baker from Zwoleni, or about collections of funds for Jews in Palestine. The files of Radom Governor's Chancery [Kancelaria Gubernatora Radomskiego] (1867-1917) is of great interest as well; it handled cases of special importance. There one can find materials on people exiled for political activities and criminal acts (and on returns from such) as well as sources on emigration of Jews (particularly to the United States); and in the early 20th century, and materials on labor strikes, Zionist activities, etc.

The city archives contain a great wealth of information on Jewish topics. The AMR collection contains numerous statistical data on migrations as well as detailed files on such things as ownership, use, and repairs of the ritual bath, kosher butchery, synagogue, and the cemetery as well as on elections to the synagogue executive board, tax matters, social programs, conversions, and other issues. They also offer information about fundraisings, carried out by the Jewish Hospital, about the activities of the funeral home associations, and about Jews avoiding military service. Similar materials, but fewer in number, are contained in the City of Kozenice Archives [Akta miasta Kozenice] collection (1817-1950). Gmina documents, however, only occasionally offer information about Jews, and these are contained only in the permanent resident record books.

The earliest extensive data on political attitudes among Jews in the 19th century are located in the collection of the Radom Division of the National War Commander Headquarters [Zarząd Naczelnika Wojennego Oddziału Radomskiego] (1861-1867), which coordinated military activities against the Polish forces during the January Uprising.<sup>12</sup> There one can find information about Jews participating in the January Uprising and working with the uprising command as well as about police informers, including those sentenced to die by the insurgents for cooperating with the Russian occupiers. A small series of documents details financial dealings of Jewish suppliers with the military. Since the uprising the state authorities watched very closely increased political activism of Jews. The surveillance expanded in the beginning of the 20th century due to the active participation of Jews in the revolutionary uprisings in the years 1905-1907. This is amply reflected in the files of the Radom Gubernia Gendarmerie Headquarters [Zarząd Żandarmerii Guberni Radomskiej] (1887-1917) and its local branches.<sup>13</sup> They mostly contain files from investigations against persons suspected of illegal political activity, including those active in the Bund, Poale Zion, Jewish Labor Party, and others. These documents include reports from police and police agents as well as personal profiles, and descriptions of activities. Often these files contain leaflets and documents detailing the structure of local party offices. The gendarmerie documents also contain materials sent to Radom from Warsaw on programs and activities of the leftist and anarchist parties. Interesting materials on the activities of Jews in leftist political movements in Ostrowiec, Radom, Wierzbnik, and other cities can be found in the archives of the Office of the Prosecutor for the Radom District [Prokurator Sądu Okręgowego Radomskiego] and of the Investigative Judge for the Radom District Court [Sędzia Śledczy Sądu Okręgowego Radomskiego], both covering the years 1905-1907.

The archives of the Radom School Administration [Radomska Dyrekcja Szkolna] (1864-1917) offer extensive documentation about the Jewish educational system under the state supervision. This collection is divided into two series: general (generalia) and specific (specialia). The former contains statistics, school programs, Jewish teachers' personal files, and correspondence on teaching Russian in the cheders. The latter holds documents from several hundred public and private elementary schools in the entire Radom gubernia. Of particular interest are the lists of persons, who paid mandatory school fees; these lists are divided by individual income levels and they include many Jews. The first private Jewish secular schools in Radom and other cities appear in the beginning of the 20th century. The said archives contain permits to operate the schools, statistical data, and information about teachers and the support staff. Similar information – lists of students, examination documents, correspondence - can be found in the archives of the Men's and Women's Gymnasiums [Gimnazjum Męskie and Gimnazjum Żeńskie - secondary schools] in Radom (both cover the years 1891-1919) which were attended also by the Jewish youth.

One group of materials in the RBPSA from the second half of the 19th century contains information about Jewish business activities. The property ownership data and notary public documents increase in number during that period due to the growing number of Jews among real estate owners and administrators and their investments in industry, trade, and other branches of economy. This collection, entitled the Radom Fiscal Administration [Izba Skarbowa Radomska] (1867-1917), holds several dozen thousand files, containing reports on tax inspections of businesses, owned by Jews, and documents detailing inheritance fees. However, these materials require a more thorough review to establish the full extent of information about Jews. Several folders in the collection The Radom Gubernia Office for Village Affairs [Urząd Gubernialny Radomski do Spraw Włościańskich] (1864-1917) contain complaints of Jews experiencing business problems.<sup>14</sup>

World War I (1914-1918)

The WWI period was for the Polish Jews a period of emancipation and struggle for equal rights in the future Poland. Information about these dramatic events is very interesting, but it is dispersed throughout the archives. In the AMR collection there is a several-hundred page file, containing correspondence between the city authorities and the Synagogue Executive Board (Dozór Bożniczy) in Radom about the elections of the rabbi and the mandatory fees to be paid by Jews. Many letters and applications in this file show the pauperization of Jews due to the devastation caused by the war and because of the evacuation of the Russian banking institutions. Other files contain materials about Jewish girls, working as volunteers for the Polish Committee for Medical Assistance [Polski Komitet Pomocy Sanitarnej], and about the deportations of so-called hostages to the gubernias in central Russia as well as about the service of Radom Jews in the tsarist army (the lists often include military ranks and units in which they served). Of particular interest are materials about the transformation of the Radom Jewish community. They contain minutes from meetings of the Radom City Council [Rada Miejska miasta Radomia], which for the first time included many Jewish members.<sup>15</sup> Jewish councilmen focused on equal rights and education. The latter is very well documented in the files of the School Commission of the Radom Land [Komisja Szkolna Ziemi Radomskiej] (1915-1918) and of the School Council of the City of Radom [Rada Szkolna Miasta Radomia] (1915-1925) collections. Both contain information about the school system, Jewish teachers, and various statistical data.

It is also worthwhile to mention the files of the Peace Courts [Sądy Pokoju] – in Białobrzegi, Kunów, Ostrowiec, Staszów, and other cities – and the Regional Courts [Sądy Obwodowe] – in Końskie, Opoczno, Opatów, Sandomierz, and other cities – all from the years 1915-1917. They contain court documents on civil suits involving Jews. They provide information about relations between various groups in small cities. Unfortunately, very little documentation remains about one of the largest industrial enterprises in Radom – the Johan (usually referred to as Jakub) Kohn Furniture Factory [Fabryka Mebli Giętych Johana Kohna], established and managed by Jews (1913-1918).

The Interwar Period (1918-1939)

The best source for information about Jews in public life in the interwar period is the collection of city and gmina archives, the remainders of the local administrations. Of these of particular importance is the AMR, which contains documents of the City Council [Rada Miasta] and the City Administration [Zarząd Miejski] as well as the letters received by them from various constituents. This collection contains the minutes of the City Council, where Jews had substantial and active representation.<sup>16</sup> In addition to information about the councilmen and their activities, these reports contain interesting ideological declarations of parties and social groups (Zionists, socialists, middle classes, and others) as well as collective declarations on issues vital not only to the citizens of Radom, but the entire country as well. One such declaration was issued in March of 1939 in response to the increasing German territorial demands. It reads, in part: “[...] we, Jews, join all other citizens in paying tribute to our Army. When need arises, we will offer not only our property but our lives as well in defense of the Honor of the Brightest Republic, the integrity of Her borders, and the freedom of Her citizens.” This collection also provides plenty of material about Jewish institutions and charitable organizations active in Radom such as the Bekerman Home for the Aged and Handicapped [Przytułek dla Starców i Kalek im. Bekermanów], the Jewish Orphanage [Dom Sierot Żydowskich], the “Ezra” Aid Society for the Poor and Sick [Stowarzyszenie Niesienia Pomocy Biednym i Chorym miasta Radomia “Ezra”], “Linas Hacedek” (Physicians’ Assistance) Society to Aid Poor Sick Jews [Towarzystwo Wspierania Biednych Chorych Żydów “Linas Hacedek” (Pomoc Lekarska)], and the Radom Branch of TOZ – the Society for the Protection of Health of the Jewish Population in Poland [Towarzystwo Ochrony Zdrowia Ludności Żydowskiej w Polsce “TOZ”]. These materials for the most part cover the 1920s; they show great need for social programs among the Radom Jews in the first years of the Polish independence as well the efforts to meet these needs. The same issues are reflected in the archives of the Radom Health Department [Wydział Zdrowia radomskiego Magistratu]. They show the effects of infectious diseases, which affected particularly hard the Old City – the old Jewish district in Radom. Many documents dispersed throughout the collection deal with Jewish business activities; among them there is a list of tool shop owners in the years 1926-1929 which contains more than 1,950 names, of which 90% appear to be Jewish. Diligent researchers will find there information about the Jewish trade movement, cultural life, and education. For genealogists, there are several thousand applications for passports which contain personal data and very often the applicants' photographs as well. These documents provide information about many members of the Jewish intellectual and social elites.<sup>17</sup>

Documents of other local administrative organs and governments in the Radom and Kozenice counties are rather fragmentary, but even they contain interesting materials about local Jews. The City of Kozenice Archives and the City of Wyśmierzyce Archives contain the full set of minutes of the city council meetings for the years of 1917-1950 which provide as much interesting information as the files in the AMR. In the gmina administration collection, the Jewish materials are contained in the files of the gmina Białobrzegi (1900-1945) – participation of Jews in its economic life; and in the files of the gmina Wielogóra (1919-1936) – extensive materials about the Firlej industrial complex near Radom owned by Mojżesz Den. Archives of many gminas (Pionki, Radom, Wolanów, Zakrzów) contain so-called books of permanent residents [księgi ludności stałej], which offer information about the local population and its migrations at any given period of that era.

Not much has been preserved in the Radom archives with regard to the participation of Jews in the local government administration. However, reports held in the collections of the Radom District Administration [Starostwo Grodzkie] (1933-1939), Radom County Administrations [Starostwo Powiatowe w Radomiu] (1922-1939), Kozenice County Administration [Starostwo Powiatowe w Kozenicach] (1933-1939), and the County Police Headquarters in Radom [Komenda Powiatowa Policji Państwowej] (1925-1939) provide information about political activity of Jews, particularly about their involvement in the communist movement. But the most valuable materials in this regard can be found in the archives of the Regional Court Prosecutor's Office [Prokurator Sądu Okręgowego] in Radom (1922-1939), which are rarely consulted by historians. They contain several dozen files on Jews active in the Communist Party of Poland and in other radical left organizations. It is worth noting that researchers may learn a great deal about the daily life of Jews from the archives of the Civil and Criminal Divisions of the Regional Court [Wydział Cywilny i Wydział Karny Sądu Okręgowego] in Radom (1917-1940); they contain divorce acts, marriage annulments, documents on court-appointed guardians for underage children and mentally ill as well as materials about the involvement of Jews in the activities of the local criminal groups.

The Radom archives have been able to preserve a very high percentage of materials about the local educational system and activities. Of particular interest are documents in the collection of the Board of Education [Inspektorat Szkolny] in Radom (1917-1939). The Board of Education supervised schools in the City of Radom and in the Radom and Kozenice Counties; its documentation contains materials about Jewish schools and kindergartens as well as copious correspondence about their activities. Of special interest are the Radom reformed cheders (private elementary schools) such as "Masoteth" (Tradition), "Mada" (Knowledge), and "Kultura" [Culture]. They provide information about the educational levels, teacher training, and sanitary conditions of these educational establishments. There is also information about the struggle of the state administration with the illegal cheders and personal information about the Jewish teachers. Additional information is contained in the Educational Board collection mentioned above; it provides information about the actions taken against Jewish parents, whose children failed to attend school. The RBPSA also holds files of several dozen public schools from the city and the region. Most of these are grade books and graduation certificate books. They also contain files of the Berek Joselewicz Elementary School, which was one of two public schools for Jewish children only – called the Sabbath schools – in the interwar period in Radom.

A very valuable source to study Jewish cultural life in Radom is a collection of posters, announcements, and leaflets from the years 1918-1939; they mostly refer to theater performances. Among them are posters announcing performances of local ensembles such as Borochoch "Strzecha Robotnicza" [Worker's Home] Association, Grosser Worker's Club [Klub Robotniczy] as well as visiting artists such as the United Jewish Ensemble of the Warsaw Artists' Association [Zjednoczona Trupa Żydowska Warszawskiego Związku Artystów], whose major star was Regina Cukier. There are also a few announcements of the Jewish Religious Congregation in Radom and advertisements of the Radomer Wochenblatt [Radom (Jewish) Weekly]. Many materials in this collection are political propaganda of various <sup>17</sup> Information in these documents is extensively discussed in S. Piątkowski, Żydzi radomscy w latach 1918-1950. Dzieje społeczności lokalnej na tle historii miasta i regionu [The Jews of Radom, 1918-1950: A History of a Local Community as a Part of the History of the City and the Region], Lublin, 1998. A doctoral dissertation in the Archives of the Maria Curie-Skłodowska University in Lublin.

political parties published during elections to the parliament and local governments and, thus, they contain anti-Semitic writings and slogans.

As it has been already stated, Jewish business activities and contributions to economy is reflected in many archival collections. Among them are the files of the Tax and State Monopoly Office [Urząd Skarbowy Akcyz i Monopoli Państwowych] in Radom (1914-1929) which contain financial as well as technical-administrative documentations of Jewish businesses, including breweries and liquor bottling plants. There are also incomplete files on Radom steel and enamel factories such as "Glinice" Casting and Enamel Factory [Fabryka Odlewów Żeliwnych i Emaliowanych "Glinice"], owned by Izrael Rozenberg and Józef Diament as well as the Casting and Iron Works [Fabryka Odlewów Kutowanych i Żeliwnych], owned by E. Gotlieb. With regard to mentioned already real estate and notary collections, the AMR, and Radom and Ilża counties contain tremendous amount of detailed information about Jewish holdings in real estate, industry, and agriculture. However, they await a thorough review. There is a similar situation is with the several dozen of notary collections in Radom, Koziences, Szydłowiec, and Zwoleń, which contain many materials documenting sales and purchases and founding of businesses, financed by Jews. Here the major source of information is the collection of the Radom notary, Władysław Roguski (the 1921-1951 period) who specialized in industrial associations.

The War and Nazi Occupation (1939-1945)

The Holocaust caused physical annihilation of the Jewish community in Poland as well as destruction of sources documenting Jewish presence in Poland for many centuries. Information about Jews in this period is present throughout the archives in various collections, but it is very fragmentary. The major source is the collections of the Radom District Supreme Council of the Jewish Elders [Naczelna Rada Starszych Ludności Żydowskiej Dystryktu Radomskiego] (1941-1942), composed of several dozen thousands of applications for identity cards in the Radom ghetto. The application forms contain personal data and often applicants' photographs as well. These materials are very valuable for genealogical research, but they also provide important information about the life in this closed community, its organizational structure, and the activities of the local Judenrat.<sup>18</sup> Another interesting source is 500 personal files of Jews, employed as forced labor in the "Bata" Shoe Factory [Fabryka Obuwia "Bata"] which are located in the collection of the Radom Shoe Factory [Radomskie Zakłady Obuwia] (1941-1959). Overwhelming majority of these laborers lived in Glinice, a district in Radom known as the little ghetto. They were deported in August 1942 to the extermination camp in Treblinka. This fact is documented by the following note on nearly all files: "[he/she] did not report to work after the liquidation of the ghetto."

The documentation of the German civilian administration is incomplete, hence it contains little material about Jews. In the archives of the Radom District Governor [Gubernator Dystryktu Radomskiego] (1939-1945) there are two collections providing information about deportations of Jewish youth to labor camps in the Lublin region in 1940.<sup>19</sup> The first of them contains interesting correspondence about the organization of individual transports and living conditions in the camps, while the other one contains recommendations for release of individual underage inmates of the camp in Cieszanów. This collection also contains the lists of earnings with the names of Jews, working as forced labor in Radom (for example, unloading coal); a file containing extracts from the "A" account to which Jews were forced to contribute by the Nazis; and individual reports about activities of local civic organizations, including the Jewish County Welfare Committee [Żydowski Komitet Opiekuńczy Powiatowy] in Radom. Very little information is contained in the archives of the Radom County Administrator (1939-1944). Only two small files contain information about deportation of Jews and anti-Jewish regulations, introduced by the Nazi occupants. These regulations were usually published in the form of announcements; many of these are stored in the Collection <sup>18</sup> For a detailed description of these materials see H. Kisiel, "Mieszkańcy radomskiego getta w świetle Źródeł archiwalnych" [w:] *Żydzi dystryktu radomskiego w okresie II wojny światowej. of Posters, Announcements, and Leaflets from the Period 1939-1945 [Zbiór plakatów, afiszów i druków ulotnych z lat 1939-1945]. They include announcements on residential permits, registration, relocations, mandatory metal scrap collection, and orders forbidding Jews to enter certain streets. There is also a copy of the announcement about the establishment of the ghetto in Radom and a map of the city with the ghetto boundaries.

There is also interesting, but unanalyzed, documentation on repressive anti-Jewish actions during the Nazi occupation; it is held in the Radom Prison [Więzenie Radomskie] collection (1939-1945). Out of more than 14,000 prisoners' personal records, 2,000 were those of Jewish prisoners, many of whom died in prison or were deported to labor and death camps.<sup>20</sup> These documents offer valuable information about individual prisoners, including reasons for imprisonment, and their fates; occasionally, they contain illegal correspondence between prisoners in Polish and Yiddish confiscated by the prison guards. This collection also contains personal records of Polish prisoners, who were imprisoned for hiding or helping Jews. Similar documentation is contained in files of the courts of that period. Here of particular interest is the collection of documents from the Special Court [Sąd Specjalny] in Radom. Its Prosecution Office [Prokuratura przy Sądzie Specjalnym] files (1939-1944) contain death sentences imposed on Jews for leaving closed districts.

A lot of information about the conditions of the Jewish population in the first months of the Nazi occupation can be found in the city and gmina archives. In the former the most important collection is the Archives of the City of Skaryszewo [Akta miasta Skaryszewa] (1939-1950), which holds materials on the introduction of anti-Jewish regulations as well as the lists of Jews from territories incorporated into Germany who were resettled to this city. Unfortunately, they cover the years 1939-1940 only. Other collections contain only singular files such as on the conversion of a Jewish school to a delousing center and infectious diseases hospital; sums exacted from the Jewish congregations in 1939 (the Białobrzegi gmina collection); and economic exploitation (Kozienice gmina collection).

Documents and related materials on the Holocaust also are available in collections from the post-WWII period. One such collection of particular importance is that of the Special Prosecutor of the Civil Court [Prokurator Specjalny Sądu Karnego] in Lublin. The Radom Branch [Ekspozytura w Radomiu] (1945-1951) contains files on investigations against Germans, employed in the administrative apparatus as well as in police units, involved in persecuting the Jewish population. In this collection there is a group of files on employees of the Weapon Factory [Fabryka Broni] in Radom where Jews were employed as forced labor and records of the guards from the special camp attached to the factory (1942-1944).<sup>21</sup> Some background material also can be found in the postwar collection of the Radom County Administrator [Starostwo Powiatowe w Radomiu] (1945-1950) and in the files of the gmina administration offices. They provide statistical tables and statements on the Nazi extermination policy in the Radom County which were compiled by the Research Institute on Social Policy [Instytut Naukowo-Społeczny] in Radom for the purpose of publishing a monographic study of the county under the Nazi occupation. This work has not been completed.

The Post-war Years (1945-1968)

In the first months after WWII, Radom was one of the largest Jewish population centers in central Poland. This was due to the fact that many Jews were returning to their home town, quite a few inmates of the Nazi camps settled there temporarily, and also a number of Jews, repatriated from the Soviet Union, were directed to this area. These migrations were recorded in the file collection of the Regional Jewish Committee [Okręgowy Komitet Żydowski - RJC] in Radom for the years 1945-1950.<sup>22</sup> In this collection there are letters from the Central Committee of Jews in Poland [Centralny Komitet Żydów Polskich] in Warsaw as well as minutes of the RJC meetings and the correspondence of the RJC with the local authorities, Jewish organizations abroad, and private persons. Documentation in the collection shows attempts to rebuild Jewish communal life in Jedlińsk, Szydłowiec, Kozienice, and most of all in Radom. Individual documents reflect the efforts to provide the Radom Jews with material goods, food, and medical services as well as attempts to recover the synagogue and the Jewish Hospital and steps taken to protect the Jewish cemetery from devastation. There is also correspondence on searches for relatives, lost during the war; participation of the RJC in exhumation of bodies; and the historical materials and testimonies collected for the upcoming trials of the Nazis. Many documents in this collection contain information about Polish-Jewish relations during the war, although this interesting material is not always objective. The crowning achievement of the RJC was the erection of the monument to the Radom Jews, who perished during the war. The monument, designed by Jakub Zajdensznr, was publicly unveiled during a special ceremony on August 17, 1950. This event was the last one during which the Radom Jews made a public showing as a religious and ethnic group. In the following years many Jews either immigrated or underwent advanced acculturation.

The files of the Regional Liquidation Office [Rejonowy Urząd Likwidacyjny] in Radom (1945-1955) constitute another interesting source of materials about Jews, and particularly about their property, in the postwar period. They include several hundred cases where the owners and/or inheritors, who resided in the Radom area before the war and after the war lived in Poland or abroad, requested that the family property be restored to them.<sup>23</sup> These requests deal with real estate (especially, private homes), land, and large factory buildings and equipment. They make it possible to trace the fate of property and the owners but they also shed light on the policies of the state. Additional materials on this issue can be found in other collections such as the index of formerly-Jewish real estate kept in the archives of the Presidium of the City Council and the County Administration [Prezydium Miejskiej Rady Narodowej i Urzędu Powiatowego] in Radom.

Fragmentary materials about Jewish life in Radom and the region after WWII are held in a few other collections as well. The AMR contains a file with correspondence between the city authorities and the RJC about the need to protect the Jewish cemetery and about erecting a monument at the site of the former Jewish ghetto. In the Kozienice County Administrator [Kozienskie Starostwo Powiatowe] archives (1945-1950) there is a list of Jews, who lived in Kozienice in 1945, and a registration application from the Jewish Committee in Zwoleń from the same period. There are also reports filed later on the situation of the Jewish population in the county; curiously, their author, the county administrator, blatantly lied, no doubt, when he claimed that there were no Jews in his jurisdiction after WWII. The collection of posters, announcements, and leaflets (1945-1989) contains two announcements on Jewish subjects. One of them is a joint statement of the bishop of Kielce and the city and county top officials denying the popular rumor that Jews committed ritual murders.

The mass immigration of Jews after the pogrom in Kielce in 1946 led to practical disappearance of Jews from Radom; the remaining few underwent complete assimilation and acculturation. Some of them became victims of the anti-Semitic campaign in 1968. The archives of the Voivodship [Province] Party Committee [KW PZPR] in Radom contain files from the Section for Communist Veterans [Referat ds. Działaczy Ruchu Robotniczego] (1975-1989) where one can find correspondence on expulsions of Jews from the party and dismissals from jobs.<sup>24</sup> One can expect to find that this kind of information in other collections at the RBPSA as well, but this is a task for future researchers.

The beginnings of the settlement were in a castle built in the 13th century, which was used to defend the place from the Tartar invasions. In 1248, the Tartars conquered the region after defeating the Polish army. As a result of the Tartar conquest, the local residents were deported and the area was not settled until the 16th century. Only then did settlers of German origin come and established new settlements. In 1551, King Zygmunt August granted a privilege to Samuel and Mikulaj Ulshnicki and Chmielnik got the status of a privately-owned town. In the 17th century, the ownership of Chmielnik passed to the Calvinist Golochowski family, and was one of the main influence centers of the Aryans in Poland. At the end of this century, Chmielnik moved to the ownership of the Ozarowski noble family, whose members returned the town to Catholicism.

As early as the 17th century, the German residents of Chmielnik started to mine iron and copper locally. During this period Chmielnik was also an important crossroads, and trade routes between Poland, Prussia and Silesia passed through it. In the 2nd half of the 18th century, workshops for textiles and metal tools were established. With the partitions of Poland at the end of the 18th century, Chmielnik passed to Austrian rule. In 1809, it was included in the [Napoleonic] Duchy of Warsaw, and in 1815 it came under Russian rule. In the second half of the 19th century, industrial undertakings were set up in Chmielnik – for soap, textiles, leather processing and shoes. During the 1863 Polish insurrection, battles took place in Chmielnik and the surrounding area between Polish insurgents and Russian army troops. On Jan. 20th 1863, the Polish insurgents took over the city and controlled it for several months, until it was re-occupied by the Russian army.

In the old Jewish cemetery of Chmielnik there are tombstones from the 13th century, which testifies that Jews had already settled there. However the first written documents in which Jewish settlement in Chmielnik is mentioned date from 1556. The Jews who settled in Chmielnik engaged mainly in trading: on 1632 the trader Pesach Yehuda from Chmielnik was known due to large transfers of money and goods he made between Chmielnik and Lviv. During the Swedish wars, in 1656, the Jewish community in Chmielnik was attacked and almost completely destroyed. The Polish armies under the command of Czarniecki, who freed the city, accused the Chmielnik Jews of providing support to the Swedish army, and murdered some 150 of them. Only in the second half of the 17th century did Jews return to settle in Chmielnik. They were allowed to acquire houses and shops and to trade. During that time, trading in wheat, cattle and wood became concentrated in Jewish hands.

According to the 1765 census, Chmielnik included 10 retailers, 9 tailors, 6 butchers, 4 bakers, 4 hatters, 3 candle-makers and some other craftsmen, and in addition 8 teachers (melameds), one Rabbi, 2 Chazzans, one undertaker, a Shamash and a supervisor of weights and measures. Altogether, 68 Jewish heads of families were enumerated in Chmielnik, engaged in various crafts and other jobs. The sound economic status of the community can be seen by its synagogue, which was built of wood and was one of the most magnificent in Poland; this synagogue remained intact until World War II.

Towards the end of the 18th century, the economic situation of Chmielnik's Jews worsened, mainly because of competition from Polish traders. Some of them asked King Stanislaw August Poniatowski to re-schedule their tax debts. The king granted their request and in September 1779 issued an order spreading the debts of several Jewish traders from Chmielnik. During the 17th and the 18th centuries, Chmielnik was the meeting place for the representatives of the 17 Jewish communities which belonged to 'Little Poland' (Małopolska), Sandomierz-Kraków county.

In the 19th century, the economic situation of the Chmielnik Jews improved, and their numbers grew. In 1852, Jewish investors approached the governor of Radom (qv.) and got a permit to build workshops and factories in Chmielnik. In the mid-19th century, a few Chmielnik Jews opened textile factories. The factory of the industrialist Zalman Pozner was especially famous. In 1876, a large fire broke out in Chmielnik, ruining most of the town's houses and destroying many Jewish businesses [as well as all the pre-1876 vital records – ed.]. At the end of the 19th century, economic life recovered and a small professional class of Jews emerged. In 1897, a survey in Chmielnik counted four Jewish physicians, one lawyer and three clerks. In addition, there were 77 independent businessmen, and 589 industrial workers and craftsmen – including 49 in textiles, 63 in wood, 25 building laborers, 11 in the metal industry and 251 tailors. Thirty Jews found their living as wagon drivers<sup>1</sup> and transport workers. The number of teachers and melamedim<sup>2</sup> in that year was 26, and 16 Jews worked in religious and community services. There were also 5 Jews who worked in agriculture.

The first Rabbi of the Chmielnik community whom we know by name, R. Yitschak, served the community during the period of the Swedish wars and was killed in the massacre of the town Jews by Polish troops in 1656. In 1676, R. Aharon Shmuel Kajdnower (the 'Maharshak'), the Rabbi of Kraków, passed away in Chmielnik. He was buried in the local cemetery.

After R. Yitzhak, the following rabbis served in Chmielnik: R. Yitzhak Meir Frenkel-Teomim; R. Eliezer son of R. Yehuda, author of Damesek Eliezer; R. Shimon Wolf from Pińczów (qv.), author of Kvod Habayit and Kvod Chachamim (1712); R. Dawid Szmuel Szmelka Szydłów son of R. Yehuda Leib (died 1741), who was nominated as Rabbi of Kraków, but moved to Działoszyce (qv.) because of a family conflict; R. Yoseph Halevy Landa (in 1763); R. Berish (in 1795); R. Yoseph Halevy Itinga son of R. Yehuda Leib from Lviv; R. Dawid Landa, a descendant of the Noda Bihuda<sup>3</sup>; R. Arye Leib Epsztajn, the Ad'mor from Ozarów. At the beginning of the 18th century, R. Eliezer son of Yehuda, author of Mishnat Eliezer, a book of commentaries on the Agada, served as the rabbi of Chmielnik.

At the end of the 18th century, Chasidism started to spread in the region, and in the 19th century, Chmielnik became an important Chasidic center, after the arrival of R. Avraham Dov Aurbach, a disciple of the Magid Dov-Ber of Mezeritsh

<sup>3</sup> lit. 'well-known from Yehuda'; the title of the responsa of R. Yechezkel Landa (Chief Rabbi of Prague) by which name he is best known.

[Międzyrzecz Volhyn, Ukraine]. At the beginning of the 19th century, R. Lipa Weisbloom, the son of R. Elimelech of Litzhensk [Leżajsk], also settled in Chmielnik. During the years 'shtiblekh' were opened in Chmielnik by the Chassidim of Gur, Alexander, Modrzyce, Radomsk and Kuzmir [Kazimierz Dolny].

Towards the end of the 19th century, a group of young intellectuals tried to modernize the Jewish educational system in Chmielnik. They gathered money and tried to open a modern Talmud-Torah in which Hebrew, Polish and craft would be learnt, but the experiment did not succeed because of opposition by the old leadership of the community. During these years, the first Zionist association was organized in Chmielnik. Its members collected money as part of the Zionist 'Sheqel' plan and spread Hebrew newspapers in the town.

The Jews between the Two World Wars

In September 1914, the German army took over Chmielnik, but after a short while the German and Austrian armies retreated, and the Russian army regained control over the town. The renewed Russian occupation brought a wave of violence against the Jews. Russian soldiers confiscated food and property from the Jews, and all commercial life in the town stopped. Three Jews were arrested by the Russian soldiers and were executed on charges of espionage for the Germans. In February 1915, about 1,100 Jewish refugees, who had fled from central Poland and Volhynia province, gathered in Chmielnik. They were housed in private apartments and in the local Beith Midrash. In the spring of 1915, the Austrian army re-occupied Chmielnik, and from then on commercial life in the town resumed. A civilian committee was set up, whose duty was to organize trade and work; the committee had one Jewish representative. In association with the committee, a department was set up to handle Jewish refugees, but the committee allocated for this a mere 150 rubles out of approximately 1000 rubles which were gathered to finance its activities. The Jewish department opened a food warehouse for the refugees and a public tea house in Chmielnik.

Between the two world wars, Chmielnik Jews worked in craft and trade. In the early 1920's there were, according to partial figures, 348 Jews who worked in the tailoring sector in 152 tailoring workshops. There were also 30 tanneries in Chmielnik, in which 93 breadwinners worked, 21 carpentry and wood products workshops, with 49 employees, 24 bakeries and food stores, with 38 employees, and 27 Jews who worked as builders. Other sectors in which Jews worked were the metal sector, with 15 employees, machine shops, employing 13 workers, and textile factories, employing 17 workers. A few dozen other breadwinners worked in factories for chemical products, paper, graphics products, and as sanitation and cleaning workers.

In 1926, a charitable fund<sup>4</sup>, supported by the Joint Distribution Committee, was set up in Chmielnik. The fund got its support money from the Joint headquarters in Warsaw, and in 1933 it had 384 members. In that year, the fund gave interest-free loans to craftsmen and traders in the town in the total sum of 58,635 zlotys. At the beginning of the 1930's, an initiative was started to raise money for the charitable fund, and several thousand zlotys were contributed by four wealthy traders from Chmielnik. Between April 1937 and February 1938, the fund gave about 500 loans in the total sum of 51,426 zlotys. At the end of the 1930's, with the worsening of the financial situation of the Poland Jews in general, and among that the Chmielnik Jews, the management committee of the Chmielnik charity fund applied to American Jews who came from Chmielnik, and asked them to support the fund too. In February 1938, the Joint office in Warsaw transferred 10,815 zlotys to the Chmielnik fund, and together with its previous capital it had available 20,061 zlotys. In June 1938, the Joint transferred to the 'common fund' in Chmielnik 1500 zlotys – as special support for poor families who had lost their source of income.

The first trade union of Jewish workers in Chmielnik was set up in the winter of 1920. Members of Poaley Zion set up a tailoring workers union, and in April 1920 a labor dispute broke out in the tailoring factories on grounds of the workers' demands for pay raises. In the 1930's, the few Polish workers who worked in Jewish-owned workshops joined the Jewish trade unions. In 1938, the wood workers joined the central wood workers trade union in Kielce province and got its support in their demand for pay raises.

In the 1920's, the orthodox controlled the community institutions and the head of the community was a member of Agudath Yisroel. In April 1931, elections for the community took place, in which a united Zionist list and the Mizrachi party participated in addition to Agudath Yisroel. About 300 voters voted for the Zionist and the Mizrachi lists. A Zionist, Yisachar Kanercuker, was elected chairman of the community.

Between the two world wars, the Jewish educational system in Chmielnik still kept its traditional style. Several yeshivas were active in the town, of which the most well known was the Beith Yoseph Yeshiva, headed by R. Yoel Yakhin. In 1924, the community opened a 'reformed cheider' in which the children learned, in addition to the religious studies, Hebrew, mathematics and Polish. The Beis Yaakov network set up a girls' school and a kindergarten in Chmielnik, and Poaley Zion Smol<sup>5</sup> set up a Yiddish-speaking TsIShO public school in which mainly children from poor families learned. The Yavne network, too, set up its own school, and the Tarbut network operated a kindergarten in Chmielnik. But the modern educational institutions did not last long, and closed intermittently because of lack of funds. There were also two general state schools in Chmielnik of the 'Szabasuwka' type, in which the language of instruction was Polish and most of the teachers were Poles, but most of the pupils were Jews. One of these schools was managed by a Polish liberal named Marszinski, who took into consideration the special needs of the Jewish pupils. The second school, in which Jews were about half of the student population, was managed by Henryk Krinitzki, who saw the school as a tool for the assimilation of Jews into Polish society. In the 1930's another general state school was set up, for girls.

In May 1930, a big fire broke in Chmielnik, which consumed many of the town's houses. In this fire two Jewish women died and five other Jews were injured and hospitalized. After the fire, the community organized a charity operation for the injured. Aid was sent also from other Jewish communities in the region.

During that time the community rabbi was R. Avraham Yitzchak Sylman, a Chasid of Gur and Kotsk, who was one of those who called upon people to join Agudath Yisroel in 1920. In December 1936, a dispute broke out concerning the appointment of a new rabbi for the community. Agudath Yisroel activists wanted R. Eliezer Yehoshua Halevy Epsztajn for the role, whereas most members of the community's management board supported the Mizrachi candidate, R. Towia Sylman, son of R. Avrohom Yitzchok. Arguments, accompanied by acts of violence, broke between the supporters of the two rabbis, and the Polish police put R. Epsztajn in custody. A delegation of community leaders left for Kielce (qv.) to persuade the district attorney to release the rabbi. Through the involvement of the leaders of the Kielce community, the rabbi was finally released, after the community deposited 50,000 zlotys bail.

Zionist activity in Chmielnik renewed right after the end of World War I. The local Zionists set up a society for learning Hebrew called Ivriya, headed by Yitzchak Aspis, leader of the town's

Zionist association. The activists set up a Bnot Zion<sup>6</sup> group affiliated to the Zionist association. In 1919, a district convention of the movement took place in Chmielnik, with the participation of Yitzchak Grinboym, one of the Zionist leaders in Poland. In May 1921, the Zionist supporters in Chmielnik held a convention with about 200 attendees. During this convention money was raised for the Keren Kayemet [Jewish National Fund]. In 1923, 67,500 marks were gathered as part of the 'Zionist Shekel' plan. In 1930, the income of Keren HaYesod in the town was 507 zlotys. In the elections for the 21st Zionist congress, held in 1939, 479 out of 493 eligible voters voted. The League for Eretz Israel got 212 votes, Al HaMishmar – 105 votes, Mizrachi – 76, Poaley Zion Smol – 50, Noar HaZioni<sup>7</sup> – 32, and Misfeget HaMedina<sup>8</sup> – 4.

In 1919, Tseirey Zion<sup>9</sup> set up a branch in Chmielnik with 65 members. In 1920, after the movement in Poland split, most members in Chmielnik joined Poaley Zion Ts.S. In 1915, Mizrachi supporters set up a branch in Chmielnik, which had 500 members in the early 20's. Poaley Zion Smol started to be active in Chmielnik before World War I. A few activists of the movement from Warsaw moved to Chmielnik and set up a small branch of the movement. In 1925, a branch of Agudat Israel was set up in Chmielnik on the initiative of local young chareidim. At the beginning of the 1930's, a branch of Tseirey Agudat Israel was organized in Chmielnik by students of the Torat Emet yeshiva.

The youth movements started their activity in Chmielnik immediately after the end of World War I. In 1919, a cell of HaShomer HaTsair was set up; by the end of the 1930's, it had about 150 members. At the beginning of the 1920's, the HaShomer movement was established in Chmielnik; it was related to Grinboym's Al HaMishmar (General Zionists<sup>10</sup>) faction. At the beginning of the 1930's, Beytar<sup>11</sup> movement, too, set up a branch in Chmielnik. In 1933, a regional convention of the movement in Kielce province was held in the town, and in 1935 there was another convention. In 1935-37, Beytar was the largest youth movement in Chmielnik and had about 200 members.

In 1918, the first elections for the municipal council were held. Among the Jewish parties contesting these elections were a Zionist list, traders and craftsmen associations and religious parties. Five members of the Zionist list entered the municipal council. In 1920, the Jewish representation in the city council grew; 20 Jewish councillors were elected and only 4 Poles. Elections to the city council were held again in 1925, in which 18 Jewish councillors were elected to the 28-member council, including 5 members of Poaley Zion Smol. Two of the three members of the town management board were Jews. For the city council elections in 1929, regulations were published limiting the number of Jews on the council, and indeed in these elections only 12 Jewish members were elected to of the 24-member council, although Jews numbered about 80% of Chmielnik's population. Under anti-Semitic pressure the number of mandates for Jews in the council was restricted further; in the 1939 elections only three Jews were elected out of 24 council members.

During World War II

With the outbreak of war, many Jewish refugees passed through Chmielnik on their way east. These escaping convoys were joined by many hundreds of Jews from Chmielnik, mainly youngsters, fleeing the terror of the German army towards the Soviet border. Before the Germans entered the town, a civil militia was organized, and Jews joined it too. The Germans entered Chmielnik on September 5th 1939. When the first tank entered the town, Wolf Moszkowicz was run over and died. After the town was occupied several Jews from the militia were caught and shot by the Germans.

A few days after the occupation of Chmielnik, the Germans gathered about 30 Jewish communal activists and some dozens of Poles and assembled them in the Beit Midrash. Among those held was the community rabbi, R. Eliezer-Yehoshua Haleivi Epszajn, and the pre-war head of the community, Shabthai Bialogorski. After a short while the Germans released the Polish detainees and set fire to the Beit Medrash, with the Jews trapped in it. A few Jews, who tried to escape through the windows of the burning building, were shot by German guards who stood outside the building. The Germans imposed on Avrohom Langwald the task of setting up a Judenrat [Jewish Council] in Chmielnik. Langwald was one of the community activists before the war, but now he found it difficult to bring other people in to the Jewish council. After failing in his task, the Germans imposed the role of constructing the Judenrat on David Zalcman and Efrayim Zalcberg. Eventually Zalcman's brother, Shmuel, was appointed as the head of the Judenrat. He was one of the prominent public activists in Chmielnik before the war, working mainly in social help and support. Shmuel Zalczman brought into the council Joseph Kleinrat, Anshel Scizurik, David Zalczman, Efrayim Zalberg, Moshe Levenstein, Yechiel Staszewski, Moshe Wajsgold (a refugee from Łódź) and a few others. The Judenrat had 24 members altogether. In August 1941, Joseph Kleinrat was appointed as deputy chairman of the Judenrat. In the middle of 1940, when German pressure to supply Jewish workforce grew and it was necessary to organize groups for forced labor, a Jewish police force was set up, headed by Moniek Pasternak.

In the beginning of 1940, regulations were set forbidding Jews from going in the street after 6 pm. Entrance to the town market and to some central streets in the city was forbidden, and a 'contribution' of 50,000 zlotys was imposed. In the spring of 1940 another 'contribution' of 100,000 zlotys was imposed. Parallel to these decrees, the Germans started uncontrolled kidnaping of Jews for forced labor. The first workers taken were employed in reconstructing houses demolished during the occupation and in various service works in the town. In the second half of 1940, the matter of Jewish forced workers became regulated. The Jewish council committed to supply a fixed quota of workers and take care of paying their wages. In August 1940, the Judenrat was ordered to send about 20 workers to Pacanów (qv.), and in September about another 100 workers. In this month, workers were taken also to Busko-Zdrój, for work in various military facilities which were set up there. In October 1940, about 500 Jewish forced labor workers worked in 'palcuwka's' (work-places) under the responsibility of the Judenrat. The wages of the Jewish workers was 25-40 groszen per hour. In the same month, the Judenrat was required to send about 200 forced labor workers to work camps around Lublin. Some of them reached Maidanek. In November 1940, more groups of Jewish forced labor workers were sent to works in Biata Podlaska (qv.).

In the summer of 1940, thousands of refugees, deported from the western regions of Poland which were annexed to the third Reich, started to arrive in Chmielnik. In August 1940, 1,150 refugees arrived, in May 1941 - 2,350 and in September 1941 - 2,176. In June 1942, the total number of Jews in Chmielnik reached about 9000. The many refugees placed a heavy burden on the Judenrat, which tried to find accommodations and support means for them. The Jewish council set up a committee to help the refugees, headed by Moshe Lewenstein. With the support money passed to the committee by the Kraków J.S.S. (Jewish self-aid organization), it set up a public kitchen in which meals were distributed for a price of 10 gröszen, the meals included 50 gr. bread, soup and potatoes. Between January 1940 and December 1941, the public kitchen served 35,000 meals to refugees and the needy. In July 1941, J.S.S. transferred to the Chmielnik Judenrat a shipment of food including sugar, oil and jam. This food was aimed mainly for distribution among the Jewish police force and the members of the Judenrat.

In April 1941, a Ghetto was set up in Chmielnik. Jews were evacuated from the town center and concentrated in a few streets and side alleys. A few month after moving the Jews to the Ghetto, the Germans changed the street names in the town to German names. The crowding in the Ghetto caused typhus epidemics to break out, and in a few months, 104 of the Ghetto inhabitants died in of these epidemics. The Judenrat set up with T.A.Z. (the Jewish health organization in Poland) a clinic and a sanatorium with 400 beds. In the health services operated by the Judenrat, Jewish doctors and nurses were employed, who served also the Jews from neighboring towns.

In 1940, Mordechai Anielewicz arrived from Warsaw for a visit to Kielce province. In Chmielnik he met with HaShomer HaTsair members. The meeting took place in a grove, 3 km from the town. Anielewicz brought with him issues of the underground newspapers published in Warsaw and information about the underground movement's activities. As a consequence of the meeting with Anielewicz, HaShomer HaTsair members set up a six-member committee and started to activate classes and groups for social activities for the youth. About 60 children and youth participated in them. In the summer of 1942, Anielewicz visited Chmielnik again on his way to the Zagłębia region, and brought to his comrades the first reports on the extermination in various regions of Poland.

In summer 1942, messages came to the Ghetto on deportations of Jews from various locations in Kielce province. When asked by the Judenrat, the German administration personnel in Chmielnik answered that there was no danger for Jews who worked. The Judenrat increased its efforts to employ as many Jews as possible; and workshops were opened in the Ghetto for various crafts and professions. On October 1st 1942, an instruction was published for all males in the Ghetto aged 12-25 to show up in the market square for a census. About 1,200 youngsters were registered and sent to the HASAG work camp in Skarzysko-Kamienna (qv.). Another 40 workers were sent to the HASAG weapon factories in Kielce.

On October 3rd 1942, 1,270 Jews were deported to the Chmielnik Ghetto from the towns Szydłów (qv.), Pierzchnica, Bogoria, Piotrkowice (qv.) and Pińczów (qv.). On the eve of the deportation from the Ghetto, the number of Jews in Chmielnik reached approximately 11,000. In the last days before the deportation, many Jews sold the valuables they had to the area peasants in order to have ready cash before being deported from the Ghetto.

On October 5th 1942, the Ghetto was surrounded by Ukrainian guard troops and a company of SS men, who came from Radom (qv.), Kielce and Busko-Zdrój. Commanding the units who participated in the Jews deportation was the Hauptman Geier, who was in charge of the annihilation of most Ghettos in the area. The next morning, on October 6th 1942, the Jewish police passed through the Jewish houses and instructed people to show up in the animal market square in Targowa Street by 8 am. Jews were permitted to bring packages and food up to 5 kg per person. During the gathering, the Germans murdered about 500 Jews who tried to hide, and also old and sick people who could not reach the gathering place. Among those murdered was the Judenrat head Shmuel Zalman. About 8,500 Jews came to the gathering place. Geier and his men passed through the Jews and confiscated jewels and money they possessed. The deportees were left in the animal market yard for a whole day without food or water, and about 70 of them died in the meantime from the thirst and the heat. From the deportee lines, the Germans took out 72 youngsters, mainly craftsmen, according to a list prepared beforehand by the Judenrat. This group was returned to the Ghetto. A few HaShomer HaTsair members succeeded in escaping the deportation and reached Warsaw.

After staying a whole day at the assembly point, the Jews were taken out of the town and were led towards Chęciny (qv.), 45 km away from Chmielnik. Left lying along the way were hundreds of bodies of Jews who could not stand the pace dictated by the Ukrainian and German guards and were shot dead. When the Chmielnik Jews arrived in Chęciny they were left there for four successive days with no food and water. After that they were put on train wagons, about 130 people per wagon, and were sent to the Treblinka death camp.

The 72 Jews who were returned to the Chmielnik Ghetto were accommodated in the Judenrat building. The Germans appointed Leon Koralnik as the head of the group. The first duty of these people was to gather the hundreds of bodies scattered in the area and bury them in a mass grave dug in the Jewish cemetery. After a few weeks another 130 Jews, who succeeded in hiding in the woods near Chmielnik during the deportation, returned to the Ghetto. The Judenrat opened a public kitchen for them in the house of one of the members, Moshe Pasternak, on Formanska Street. In November 1942, the number of the Jews in the Ghetto grew to 500, with the arrival of more Jews who had escaped during deportations in the surrounding communities. On November 5th, a troop of German gendarmes surrounded the residences of the last Jews in Chmielnik. Of the 500 Jews who were in the building, 75 were selected and transferred to a work camp in Stopnica (qv.). The rest were put on trucks of the HASAG company, which came to Chmielnik, and were transferred to the Skarzysko-Kamienna camp.

After the War

After the liberation, 40 survivors returned to Chmielnik, mainly refugees who fled to the Soviet Union on the outbreak of the war. Some of them settled there. In August 1945, acts of violence against the Jews took place in Chmielnik, during which Pinchas Goldlist and Rachel Klarman were murdered by Polish anti-Semites. Following these murders the last Jews abandoned Chmielnik.

Chmielnik Surnames – from the 1885-1900 vital records

Listed below are the 2,125 unique surnames from the 10,756 entries in the Chmielnik Jewish vital records of 1885-1900, as extracted by the Jewish Records Indexing Poland (JRI) Project's team in Warsaw. This list contains all surnames and their frequencies (the number of occurrences). You will note many spelling variants, transcription errors, masculine/feminine versions, etc. In order for these records to become available, please contribute to the JRI Chmielnik project. For more information, see Kielce-Radom SIG Journal V 4 (Autumn 2001), pages 38-39.

Transcribed below are the entries for Chmielnik from the 1929 Polish business directory Księga Adresowa Polski (Wraz z w.m. Gdańskiem) dla Handlu, Przemysłu Rzemiosł i Rolnictwa [Directory of Poland (including Gdańsk) for trade, industry, handicraft and agriculture], (Warszawa, 1929), pages 181-182. For more information about this directory, see Kielce-Radom SIG Journal IV:1 (Winter 2000), pages 27-29.

The directory is organized by province, then by town, and then by occupation within each town. The occupations are listed alphabetically in Polish (except for the first few officials and medical/legal professions), with French translation following.

For this transcript, I have alphabetized the entries by surname, with the occupation heading as the second column. I've omitted some information, such as business names, and the French translations of the occupation headings.

For the full original entries, see the images online at < <http://www.jewishgen.org/jri-pl/bizdir/start.htm> >. We thank JRI-Poland for making these pages available.

The Castle on the Hill – In Memory

By Betty Provizer Starkman

It was one of those rare perfect October mornings. Bonfires burning the crop residue, lent a curl of smoke and a pleasant scent to the air. The trees were bathed in bright sunlight. Red and golden leaves formed a bower above the road as we approached the top of a hill in the Polish countryside. We were south of Warsaw, south of Radom. A signpost announced "ILZA – 1 kilometer". My heart beat wildly. In the distance we caught a glimpse of the Zamek, the castle ruins upon the Barg, the hill, where my father and ancestors played as children. In the lovely valley below lay my fabled shtetl, Ilza with its narrow winding streets and ancient leaning houses. In Polish, Ilza means tears. The Jewish inhabitants, who were already here in the fourteenth century, had affectionately called it Drilge. No one any longer recalls why. No Jew lives in Drilge anymore.

I am finally here—here—here— really here. So Ilza is truly a place. Not just an elusive childhood dream, not just a vague impression from a faded photograph, not just old men's nostalgic memories and stories, not just the haunting melody of a bedtime lullaby, but a town, a city, a reality, a part of me and my being, of my ancestors and my past. Ilza is a part of my personal history and my soul, a microcosm of the history of the Jewish people.

So we wander the cobbled streets of my shtetl. Grandfather's house still stands on the Rynek, the market square, where the Jewish people lived and had their businesses. The only house on the square with a wrought iron balcony, it is easy to identify. In this house grandmother bore six children and died at the age of thirty four. My great-grandparents, Chaim and Elta Prowizor of Mogielnica, came to this house in 1909, to bid farewell to their children and grandchildren as they departed for pre-state Israel. The family fled from this house in 1917 when Ilza became a battleground for the warring armies of Russia and Germany. This is the house from which my father, Jack Provizer left in 1918 at the age of fifteen to become a Halutz (guardian) in pre-state Israel. In this house, grandfather, Mayer Rachmiel Prowizor held secret early Zionist meetings attended by Tzvi Zabolinsky and Shalom Asch. In this home grandfather planned the Jewish School which he built when the children of Drilge were plagued by anti-Semitism. In this house lived two Jewish teachers' grandfather brought from Warsaw to educate the children. One Passover morning grandfather dragged my terrified father, the eldest son from this house. They entreated the local priest to prevent a Pogrom by approaching peasants armed with pitchforks. Perhaps the most important decision made in this house occurred in 1919 and saved my immediate family. They packed their candlesticks, their books, their bedding and belongings and began the difficult journey to Palestine.

We quickly become a curiosity as we explore the town; American Jews, complete with translator, chauffeur driven car, cameras, tape recorders and tennis shoes. Children surround us as word spreads. Old women in babushkas speak into our tape recorder telling us that they knew our family. They react with amazement as their voices echoed back via tape. Quickly they scrawled post cards to American family members for us to mail in the United States. Dr. Adam Bednarchyk, a retired professor and self appointed Ilza historian was sent for as we purchased flowers and made inquiries.

With the help of Dr. Bednarchyk, we located the former synagogue. It is a small gem on the edge of a quiet stream and a picturesque wooden bridge. It is now a cinema set far back on a broad green lawn. As if in a dream, I remembered hearing of the stream and wooden bridge, in another world and another life. The Synagogue was locked and we were not able to enter. My great-great-great grandparents and the subsequent generations worshipped here. The Swastika-covered synagogue was being torn during my last visit in 1996. I attempted to stop the process, which is against Polish law. It was too late and the synagogue site is now an empty lot. I recited Kaddish, lit a Yahrzeit candle and was the last Jew in the Ilza/Drilge Synagogue.

The search for the home of my great-grandparents, Azriel and Rechel Samet, was another disappointment. It had been destroyed some months earlier. Childhood stories told of an extremely deep dark basement with a foundation of ancient burned boulders. These huge stones were presumably remnants of the Tartar invasion of 1241, when Ilza was destroyed by fire. Subsequent generations had probably built and rebuilt upon the former burned foundations.

No one in this small town seemed to know the location of the Jewish Cemetery, the place of rest for our ancestors for at least 200 years. Dr. Bednarchyk led us there without hesitation. Up a shallow hill, to our horror, we discovered a young forest – no stone, no monument, no wall, no gate, no shard, no memorial; only fallen leaves, chestnuts and trees. The otherworldly silence was broken by our tears. We recited Kaddish and laid our flowers in the nonexistent cemetery. This was a scene to be repeated almost daily during our Polish travels. We were later told that the Jewish tombstones of Ilza/Drilge were used as paving material following World War II. Forty-two years later we saw no evidence of this.

The summit of the barg yields romantic mediaeval castle ruins. Below is a stunning view of the surrounding countryside and tiny multicolored buildings of old and new Ilza. Young boys, their imaginations at play, dart in and out of the labyrinth of crumbling ruins and buildings. Bedtime stories of my childhood told of the castle built by King Casimir the Great for his bride Jadwiga. When Poland lost one of her innumerable wars, the Queen shed so many tears that the town was named Ilza – tears. Fact or fiction? Is this what legends and myths are made of?

On October 22, 1942, the Germans ordered the remaining 1,990 Jewish residents of Ilza to the town square in groups. There they were stripped of any remaining valuables and shipped off to Treblinka extermination camp, where most perished. On that date the ancient shtetl Drilge suffered death throes and ceased to exist – never to be reborn.

There is no Memorial or Yizkor book for Ilza, no Jewish Cemetery, no Jewish resident to mourn for the lost little shtetl, the lost way of life, the lost generations. Jewish Ilza lives today only in the collective memories of its few former residents and their descendents. So I remember, as I stand here at the Prowizor family home on the Rynek in Drilge. I stand weeping, touching the walls, saying Kaddish. Saying Kaddish for my ancestors and for those who were not wise enough, not brave enough, not lucky enough, not rich enough to have followed grandfather out of Europe.

Do I hear the faint laughter of six little children? Is that the beautiful plaintive voice of grandfather chanting the evening prayers? Do I smell the aroma of freshly baked challah? Is there a slight shadow behind the lace curtain peering out at me? Will grandmother, tall and blonde appear and embrace me, her namesake? No, I am sure that it is all part of the illusion, part of the heart, part of the dream, part of being

Jewish Life in Iwaniska (Ivansk): A Memorial Project

I am trying to contact anyone who has roots in the shtetl of Iwaniska (in Yiddish, "Ivansk"). I need your help in obtaining suitable material to create a portrayal of Jewish life in Ivansk. The account will appear on the JewishGen ShtetLinks web site.

Personal and family recollections of life in the shtetl as well as copies of photographs, maps, drawings or other documents would be treasured. All contributors will be acknowledged in the JewishGen site.

Extract Data in this Issue

Ilża	Marriages	1866-1877	David Price
Secemin	B M D	1846-1865	Leah Bisel
Końskie	Births	1872-1884	Dolores Ring

The vital record extracts for this issue are the 1866-1877 Ilża marriages, prepared by David Price; the 1846-1865 Secemin births, marriages and deaths, by Leah Bisel; and the 1872-1884 Końskie births, extracted by Dolores Ring. This data has been extracted from the civil registration books in possession of the Polish State Archives, and microfilmed by the Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints (LDS). These extractions include information derived directly from the original registrations on the following LDS microfilms:

#1,192,419 Ilża 1866-1870
 #1,192,420 Ilża 1871-1875
 #1,201,345 Ilża 1876
 #1,201,346 Ilża 1877
 #0,716,108 Secemin 1846-1865
 #1,192,422 Końskie 1872-1874, 1877
 #1,808,866 Końskie 1878-1880
 #1,809,015 Końskie 1881-1884

There are additional microfilmed records available for all three towns.

Ilża

Ilża (known as "Drilch" in Yiddish) was the district town (the county seat) of Ilża powiat, in eastern Radom gubernia. The town of Ilża's Jewish population in 1897 was 2,069, and in 1931 it was 1,545.

This issue contains extracts of the 252 Jewish marriages recorded in Ilża between 1866 and 1877. The Jewish vital records registers of Ilża for this period also contain registrations from several surrounding towns, such as Wierzbnik, Wąchock, and Starachowice, as well as many small villages in the area.

Jewish vital records for Ilża from 1810 until 1825 were recorded in the Roman Catholic civil registry of Ilża. From 1825 until 1850, the Jewish records for Ilża can be found in the Siemno Jewish register.

The Kielce-Radom SIG Journal has previously published extracts of the 1850-1877 Ilża Jewish births, 1850-1865 in III:1 (Winter 1999), pages 21-36, and 1866-1877 in VI:1 (Winter 2002), pages 46-63.

The Ilża marriages include marriage partners from many other area towns, notably Kazanów, Starachowice, Szydłowiec, Wąchock and Wierzbnik.

Secemin

Secemin, located in the Włoszczowa district of northwestern Kielce gubernia, is the "new" town in this issue, a town for which we have never before published records. The town of Secemin itself had a very small Jewish population: 96 Jews in 1857 (11% of the town's total population), 171 Jews in 1897 (14%), 224 Jews in 1921 (14%), and 180 Jews in 1939.

For this issue, Leah Bisel has extracted all of the births, marriages and deaths recorded in Secemin for 1846-1865. Most of the records are not for residents of the town of Secemin, but for residents of the surrounding rural villages.

Końskie

Końskie (known as "Kinsk" in Yiddish) was the district town (the county seat) of Końskie powiat, in western Radom gubernia. The town of Końskie's Jewish population in 1897 was 4,453, and in 1931 it was 5,037.

Here we present the 1,371 Jewish births recorded for 1872-1884. The original records are in Russian.

The records for 1875-1876 are not on the LDS microfilms, but do exist at the Polish State Archives in Kielce, according to the PSA's inventories.

The Kielce-Radom SIG Journal has previously published extracts of the 1860-1884 Końskie Jewish marriages, in VII:1 (Winter 2002), pages 28-45.

Caution

These extracts are intended to assist the researcher in selecting records that may be of use for further study. There may be errors in interpretation in these extracts, due to the uneven quality of legibility of the handwriting, the microfilming, and the condition of the microfilm itself, in addition to errors in the original record books. As always, it is prudent for the researcher, when using secondary source data such as these extracts, to examine the primary source data for final verification. It is always best for the genealogist to view the actual records pertaining to his/her family to verify the interpretation, and glean additional facts.
